Nazis Take Laon, Allies Still Falling Back

$7,000,000,000 Set as Cost For 50,000 War Planes

Senate Group Approves Army Outlay, Speeds Plan to Floor

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Cost of a 50,000-plane air force for the United States was officially set at seven billion dollars yesterday as the Government and industry moved swiftly to translate the extraordinary defense program into actuality.

Actions contributing to the acceleration drive included these:

On Capitol Hill, the Senate Appropriations Committee approved the Army phases of the emergency $1,182,000,000 outlay and brought it to the floor for consideration today. Three other congressional committees sped action on various phases of the program in an effort to have the funds available early in June.

Downtown, War, Navy and Treasury Department officials met with more than 100 leading aircraft manufacturers to gear up warplane production to higher levels.

Has Capital, Workers

Secretary Morgenthau declared, as a result of the conference, that the aircraft industry has the capital and skilled workers to carry out the initial phases of the plane program. He said the labor supply is such that labor standards need not be sacrificed to expedite production.

Another Government fiscal agency announced, however, that financial backing would be given to industries lacking capital for national defense expansion. Jesse Jones, Federal loan administrator, said the RFC was ready to cooperate with banks making secured loans for defense purposes by underwriting or directly taking 75 per cent of the loan.

Brig. Gen. L. D. Gasser, deputy chief of staff, told a House committee the War Department is satisfied Germany has no secret weapon such as a "nerve gun" or other device.

A revolutionary type of aircraft engine, flat to fit into a plane's wing and reduce air resistance, thereby adding 10 per cent to speed and 15 per cent to cruising ranges, was announced at New York by the Aviation Manufacturing Corporation.

German Spending

The House Military Affairs Committee was told by War Department sources that Germany had spent the equivalent of $100,000,000,000 in preparing for the present war, devoting one-third of its populace to the effort in the past six years.

President Roosevelt asked Congress to appropriate $35,000,000 for purchase of strategic war materials, bringing the amount proposed for the augmented reserve of manganese, tin, rubber, etc., next year to $60,000,000.

Establishment of an $8,400,000 aircraft engine research laboratory under the National Advisory Committee for Aernautics, to assure higher speeds for the war planes of tomorrow was requested by the President.

Col. Harry K. Rutherford, Army official in charge of industrial preparedness plans, told the House Military Committee it would take from 20 to 24 months for the United States to turn out munitions in quantity if war were declared tomorrow, and that under

Supreme Court Upholds Coal Price Fixing

Congress Has Right To Stabilize Trade By Law, Says Ruling

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld the constitutionality of the National Bituminous Coal Act, enacted in 1937 to stabilize the soft coal industry through marketing and minimum price-fixing regulations.

In an opinion read by Justice Douglas the court asserted that the "strategic character of this industry in our economy" and the "chaotic conditions which have prevailed in it" justified Federal intervention. Justice McReynolds dissented.

Another decision handed down yesterday invalidated a Connecticut statute licensing the solicitation of funds for religious purposes and asserted the citizen's right to put forward religious or political opinions which "seem the rankest error to his neighbor" is essential to democracy.

Opinion by Roberts

The case arose from the action of a member of Jehovah's Witnesses in playing a phonograph record attacking the Catholic Church before two Catholics in the streets of New Haven. Connecticut courts held him guilty of inciting a breach of the peace.

The Supreme Court's unanimous opinion, written by Justice Roberts, notes that men may resort to vilification or falsehoods in order to convert others to their own beliefs, but declares that, "in spite of the probability of excesses and abuses," the freedom to engage in such argument is "essential to enlightened opinion and right conduct on the part of the citizens of a democracy."

At the same time, the court warns that there are limits to the exercise of these liberties, and that the States have the power to punish persons who exceed these limits.

"Events familiar to all," Justice Roberts wrote, emphasize "the dan-

Bandit Gets $1,100 in D. C. Office Building

3 Forced to Lie on Floor While Man Escapes In Rush-Hour Throng

A wide-eyed, pock-marked man with a .32 automatic pistol yesterday pocketed $1,100 in a daring late afternoon holdup of a personal finance company on the second floor of the Southern Building, Fifteenth and H streets northwest.

Two men and a woman, employes of the concern, Columbia System, Inc., 220 Southern Building, were forced to lie down on the floor while the bandit ran down a stairway and vanished in homeward-bound throngs in the financial district.

Thought Bandit Joked

W. L. Schun, 33 of 6525 Ridgewood avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., manager of the company, was bent over his desk when the bandit walked into his private office about 4:40 p. m. The robber spoke quietly: "Get up and go into the other room."

Schuh looked up at the man, and although he saw the pistol, thought the bandit was joking and laughed. The man then spoke more sternly, "Get going if you value your life."

Behind the counter in the main office the bandit herded Schuh, William W. Barker, 34, of 2636 Monroe street northeast, the cashier, and Kathleen Grady, 26, of 1926 Second street northeast, a stenographer, into a corner, out of sight of persons entering and leaving elevators almost directly in front of the offices.

Well Dressed

The gunman, well dressed in brown and with a gray felt hat pulled far down over his forehead, opened the cash drawer and stuffed all the currency into his suit coat pocket. He then leveled his pistol at the trio in the corner and told them to lie down until he had left. They obeyed.

Schuh said the bandit had wide-set, open blue eyes of a kind he would never forget. Other company employes told detectives the robber's face was pockmarked.

Fred's father, wealthy head of a Chicago loan company, said "Back Talk" with its illuminating note was mailed from Miami Beach, Fla., Saturday and reached the addresses today.

Gas Dealers Agree To End Price War, Hike Rate 2 Cents

Washington gasoline prices in effect will increase 2 cents a gallon today. Dealers last night voted to cease returning 2 cents a gallon for cash in a price-cutting war.

Agreement was reached by more than 500 members of the District Gasoline Dealers Association at a hectic dinner session at the Shoreham Hotel. Every dealer "with the exception of a very few," will be affected, officials said.

John H. Donahue, from Pittsburgh, Pa., who successfully ended gasoline warfare in his home county, was the voice which swung unanimous support to a truce. He was called here by the association.

Discounts for commercial vehicles will continue, it was agreed.

German Gains Continue Despite Stout Resistance on Two Fronts

60,000 in Advance Guard Speeding Over Northern Plains, Defenders Report

Bulletin

Paris (Thursday), May 21 (AP).—Military commentators asserted today that Laon is in French hands, despite the German claim to have captured the city. They said other points still held by the French where the Germans are thrusting into Northern France included Cambrai, Peronne and La Fere.

By Henry Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, May 20.—Across the northern plains of France, Adolf Hitler's men in rolling armor—60,000 strong in the advance guard—battered westward tonight, the English Channel as their goal.

The direction of this steel-plated spearhead of five mechanized divisions eased the threat to Paris after the vanguard had thrust to within 80 miles of the French capital.

The new objective—besides the oft-mentioned aim of bases for direct attack on the British Isles—apparently was to drive an iron wedge between the main French forces defending Paris and the British-Belgian-French armies in Belgium.

Allies Drop Back

Northern Allied armies were forced to drop back to intercept the threat, while the main body of French troops fought to stem the German advance.

Whether Germany definitely had abandoned the idea of striking at Paris remained uncertain.

The French communique tonight said the "German push is still strong in the north and west of St. Quentin," but that Nazi attacks were being repulsed in the region to the east, about Montmedy.

From St. Quentin, abandoned by the French after a seesaw battle of tanks, and from the Le Cateau-La Fere sector—30 miles wide across the German "bulge"—it is roughly 100 miles to the channel port of Calais, which is directly across from Dover, England.

Most of the armored columns and aerial striking forces were concentrated in the Le Cateau-La Fere sector, where they reached the west bank of the canal running from the Oise to the Sambre River. Le Cateau is 25 miles northeast of St. Quentin, La Fere about 15 miles southeast, and 20 miles northwest of Laon.

Germans Cross Aisne

Their charge forward continued there, forcing the French to withdraw from St. Quentin—80 miles northeast of Paris—but 11 days of titanic struggle on the Western Front, with constant fighting, mangling of roads by machines and

British Bombers Continue Farflung Raids on Enemy Troops and Bases

By Robert P. Post

London, May 20.—Further attacks by the Royal Air Force on the German lines of communication leading up to the battle "bulge" as well as northward where the German tanks are charging the British battle lines were announced tonight.

Further bombing attacks on oil refineries in northwest Germany also were reported.

Air Raid in Norway

These operations included attacks on railway stations and bridges in south Brussels, and direct hit was obtained on the railway bridge at Roux. Track and rolling stock were both damaged. In the Aisne sector troop and tank concentrations were attacked. Near Sedan a big German truck park was fired.

Nor did the R. A. F. neglect the fields of Norway. The airfield at Vaernes, north of Trondheim, also was attacked last night during a British reconnaisance flight.

Attack from 1,500 Feet

"A large number of enemy aircraft standing on the aerodrome repeatedly were bombed and machine gunned by relays of Hudson aircraft," the air ministry said. "Much damage is believed to have been done. Seven fires were started. A German seaplane was attacked on the way home."

British general headquarters said "repeated attacks (Monday) by German armored and motorized formations" have been repulsed by Allied forces in Belgium.

The communique said:

"Repeated attacks by German armored and motorized formations in the area south of the River Scarpe and against the Scheldt position were successfully beaten off by the Allied forces.

"The Belgian army has contributed largely toward the success of the defensive battle now being fought."

The Scheldt positions are east of Antwerp in northern Belgium and the River Scarpe flows north of Cambrai, France.

While the Germans admittedly have a tremendous air superiority it would appear that the Allied practice of getting about four planes for every one they lose must have its effect in cutting it down.

For instance, one R. A. F. group reported a mixed bag of 50 Heinkels, Dorniers, Junkers and Messerschmitts for a loss of less than half that number during Saturday and Sunday. Thirty-four Germans actually were seen to crash while 16 were put out of action, the air ministry said.

Report after report tells of small British formations plunging down into huge waves of German planes.

With Hitler at the Front

Louvain Library a Ruins Again; City's 41,000 Residents Flee

By Louis P. Lochner

With the German Western Armies, May 20.—American newspaper correspondents, guests of Adolf Hitler, today saw the ruins of Louvain Library, which was erected on Herbert Hoover Square by cooperation of numerous American universities.

The building had been gutted by fire. Its 700,000 volumes must be considered lost. All floors had been swept by the blaze.

No one seemed to be able to say by whom or how the blaze had been set. From the basement wisps of smoke still rose.

Practically the entire population of Louvain, 41,000, had fled. The German military commander of the city, Lieut. Col. Engelmann, tried to form an emergency city council with a fire captain and the lone professor remaining as the nucleus. Engelmann indicated that most of the civil administration would be turned over to the council.

There was neither light nor water available. The city, studded by the ruins of the library, presented a picture of desolation.

Another scene which I saw was the shambles of the chateau of Sternockerzeel — property of the Archduke Otto, pretender to the non-existent Austrian throne.

On the other hand, life in Brussels, on the surface at least, went on unperturbed.

Hitler today changed his general headquarters three times—so rapidly were his forces following up their advantage.

The swift movement caused newspaper correspondents, his personal guests, several dejected moments. It was necessary to obtain his approval for the specific section of the front which we wished to visit. Adjutants of the high command assigned to escort us were unable to

GERMAN ARMIES are pushing three major drives westward across Belgium and northern France, Berlin dispatches indicate, while a fourth thrust southwestward toward Paris yesterday carried the Nazi legions to within 60 miles of the French capital.

NORTHERNMOST PUSH was toward Ghent, Belgium, and reached 25 miles west of Brussels, Berlin said.

SOUTHWEST OF BRUSSELS, the second Nazi drive reached Tournai, Belgium, near the French border, and less than 50 miles from the coast.

THIRD AND HEAVIEST drive was the westward extension, to Peronne and Cambrai, of the "Big Bulge" across northern France. The French claimed to be holding this drive along the 25-mile line Cambrai-Peronne.

FOURTH AND NEWEST push, according to the Germans, engulfed the French city of Laon and pushed on to the Aisne-Oise Canal, despite a French counterattack.

ANOTHER ALLIED counterattack against the "Big Bulge," and between it and the southern side of the second Nazi drive, failed, the Germans said. This Allied force, Berlin claimed, was in danger of being surrounded in a triangular "sack" marked by Tournai, Charleroi and Cambrai.

Bulletin

Paris, May 21 (AP).—Allied Warplanes and tanks were reported today to have inflicted costly losses among German motorcyclists darting into Northern France at the head of an attempted drive for the channel coast.

French said the motorcyclists were using a new technique of swift daylight thrusts forward and then nightly withdrawals to temporary bases.

Immediately on discovery of the technique, they said, the strafing and bombing the enemy's lines before they could regain their bases, at the same time cutting at them on the ground with tanks.

Allied Troops Mass To Cut 'Bulge,' Switzerland Hears

Basel, Switzerland, May 20.—Allied forces under Gen. Maxime Weygand are preparing a counter-offensive to pinch off the German pocket from the Valenciennes region to Rethel, it was reported here today.

Bearing out the reports heard here were the massing of British and Belgian forces supported by French motorized units in the Valenciennes region and a still more powerful French force at Rethel and nearby Rheims, behind the Aisne River.

Canada Plans Third Division

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, May 20.—Prime Minister MacKenzie King said tonight in the House of Commons that Canada has more than 100,000 men on military duty, 23,000 in England, and will undertake to raise a third division for service.

He reported the First Division in Europe would be followed by another of 24,945 men.

More than 9,000 are engaged in coast defense, 16,000 are assigned to various depots, 1,665 are guarding vital centers and more than 6,000 are at miscellaneous tasks, he said. The air force has 1,389 officers and 10,926 men.

Outlining a $700,000,000 war program for the fiscal year—$2,000,000 a day—the Prime Minister said the

Swastika Unfurled Above Citadel, Reich Troops Draw Sack Around Foes

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, May 20.—Germany's blitzkrieg troops pushed deeper into France today by capturing the City of Laon, 75 miles northeast of Paris, while to the north Nazi warriors created a huge "sack" which they sought to close and trap thousands of Allied soldiers.

The German high command in a special communique declared that the German warflag "is flying from the citadel of Laon" and that the Germans had advanced to the canal connecting the Oise-Aisne rivers, 6 miles southwest of Laon.

Thus, with new ground gained on the eastern edge of the German pocket in France, the Nazis were headed toward Noyon, only 80 miles north of Paris. Both Laon and Noyon were held by the Germans during most of the World War and Noyon then was destroyed by heavy bombardments.

This German push reached to within 20 miles of Soissons, around which Americans fought in the summer of 1918. Soissons is 55 miles northeast of Paris, 30 miles north of Chateau-Thierry, where Americans halted the German offensive in June, 1918.

Drive Toward Channel

On the north flank of the German spearhead driving toward the English Channel in an attempt to isolate and destroy the British army of 300,000 in Belgium and northern France, an authoritative source pictured the "sack" as follows:

The bottom is the Belgian city of Charleroi, on the Sambre River, 20 miles west of Namur.

The northern part of the "mouth," which opens westward toward the channel, is Tournai, Belgium, 50 miles northwest of Charleroi.

The southern part of the "mouth" is Cambrai, France, 35 miles southeast of Tournai and 55 miles southwest of Charleroi.

The northern edge of this "sack" apparently was formed by a new German thrust west to Tournai from just south of Brussels. Charleroi has not yet been claimed by the Germans.

Polish Triumph Recalled

Many Belgians and French and perhaps British are believed almost surrounded in the "sack."

DNB, the German official news agency, saw in the possible closing of the "sack" a repetition of the Kutno Battle in the Polish campaign last September where the Germans reported bagging 170,000 prisoners.

The news agency said there was great activity along the channel ports on the continent, indicating the British desired to withdraw "to their island."

DNB added that the British also had been withdrawn from the Maginot Line to channel ports.

Although not telling definitely why the German steel-sheathed spearheads on the west side of the bulge had swerved from the road to Paris, the high command pointed out that they had plunged 20 to 30 miles westward from St. Quentin, which is 30 miles below Cambrai, in a day's attack.

The Germans estimate that 300,000 British on the Belgian-French front would be in danger of being pinched off from the main Allied forces if the Nazi drive toward the

All Democrats In '40 Race May Yield in Crisis

Withdrawal in Favor Of Roosevelt, Likely If War Continues

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's name may be the only one placed in nomination before the Democratic National Convention if the present international crisis continues.

Although none of the major Democratic Presidential candidates have formally withdrawn from the race, this view was voiced yesterday in several of their camps.

Only in the event the President definitely and dramatically declines to run will any real Democratic convention contest develop for the nomination, it was indicated.

Hull Backers Hopeful

Supporters of Secretary of State Hull have not yet entirely abandoned the belief that Mr. Roosevelt will decline and urge Hull, but political gloom yesterday pervaded the following of every other Presidential possibility.

Reports that the President is considering a "coalition Cabinet" meanwhile drew the fire of both Republicans and Democrats, while Senator Norris, of Nebraska, a political independent, commented:

"Politicians are not yet ready for coalition."

It was reported last week that at least one Cabinet post—Secretary of the Navy—has been offered to a Republican, Col. Frank Knox, 1936 Vice Presidential nominee.

But at the White House, Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, said: "I don't know anything about" reports that Mr. Roosevelt is considering appointment of a coalition cabinet.

The armistice on politics where national defense is concerned, remained unbroken as former Gov. Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential nominee, sped east to confer with the President tomorrow. Landon disclaimed any knowledge of any coalition move.

LaGuardia Mentioned

Mentioned for possible appointment to the post of Secretary of War in any coalition effort was also Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York. A former Progressive Republican, LaGuardia recently has been associated with the American Labor Party and has closely cooperated with the President.

Indications that President Roosevelt, in a continuing emergency, may have no convention competitors, came from some quarters opposed to a third term.

Only two Democratic candidates have announced unconditionally that their names will be presented —Vice President Garner and Postmaster General Farley.

Neither has withdrawn from the race or is expected to before the President breaks his silence. But some friends of both believe that if the President under present conditions decides to make the run, neither Garner nor Farley will sanction nominating speeches in their behalf.

A similar forecast came from the camp of Senator Wheeler, (Democrat), of Montana, who is a candidate only "if" the President does not run.

Sen. D. Worth Clark, of Idaho, a Wheeler backer, declared it would be futile for any Democrat to bid against the President's name in the present situation.

Primary in New Jersey

With a majority of convention delegates already instructed or committed to a third term, the last remaining Presidential primary will be held today in New Jersey. The names of President Roosevelt and New York District Attorney Dewey are unopposed on the New Jersey Democratic and Republican preferential ballots.

There was no direct word from the President on "Cabinet coalition" speculation. Democratic leaders who attended yesterday's legislative conference at the White House said the subject was not mentioned.

Reports centered around the posts of Secretary of Navy, now held by Charles Edison, candidate for the New Jersey gubernatorial nomination, and Secretary of War, held by Harry H. Woodring, whose resignation has frequently been rumored.

At the White House, Early said he presumed Edison would resign if nominated for New Jersey Governor, or "might wish to stay in the Cabinet and get out of the New Jersey race—I don't know."

G. O. P. Opposed

Republicans generally at the Capitol and in the field disparaged the coalition talk. House Minority Leader Martin charged it is "being put forward by the New Dealers to eliminate, if possible, the third-term issue which will arise if President Roosevelt is nominated. Martain said it would be 'extremely unfortunate if we developed into a one-party government in this country."

Plane Builders Pledge Cooperation for Defense

the present expansion program this period would be cut to 15 months.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's declaration that "hysteria" surrounded the defense program was supported by some Republicans in Congress, as Mrs. Roosevelt deplored as "unfortunate" his reference to "powerful elements" here wishing to push America into war.

Opposing the La Follette bill to outlaw use of labor spies in industry, Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, said it would make it difficult to stop "fifth column" activities and growth of communism.

Testimony on the cost of a 50,000-plane air force, which President Roosevelt set last week as a national objective, was given to the House Military Affairs Committee by Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps. Arnold said the planes themselves would cost an average of $75,000 each, and an additional $70,000 apiece a year maintenance, including pilots, bases, and the like.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, asked the same committee to approve legislation to raise the Army plane limit immediately from 6,000 to 10,000. The "real limit," he added, is "not what you appropriate but what we can buy on the present market." The 10,000 top may be beyond what the Army can get next year, he stated.

Under emergency and regular funds, a total of 2,557 Army planes would be bought in the fiscal year 1941 and all but 340 of these will be training craft. Naval purchases are expected to bring the total to about 3,000 planes of all types.

Stressing the importance of increasing pilot training, Gen. Arnold said that American plane production capacity would reach a monthly rate of 1,200 by December but that the Army was now producing only this number of pilots a year.

Five Air Corps bases, including March, Barksdale and Maxwell Fields, will be converted into training centers with the same output as San Antonio, to produce 7,000 fliers annually, he said.

Under this expanded effort, Arnold testified, the educational requirements for flying cadets will be lowered and planes simplified. Appointments are now confined to college students, with graduates preferred. The National Academy of Sciences is now studying the program of simplifying the complicated "gadgets" used on combat planes, he said, chiefly to speed production.

The $1,820,941,000 Army bill, carrying $1,497,711,368 in cash and $323,229,636 in contractual authority for the regular and emergency military programs, was sped to the Senate floor after less than two hours' consideration by the Appropriations Committee.

Approval was given to a subcommittee action adding $50,000,000 beyond the President's recommendations for enlarging the regular Army to the full peace strength of 280,000. An unbudgeted $2,500,000 added by the subcommittee for expanding military posts was eliminated, however. The full committee voted $66,000,000 in cash and a like amount in contractual authority for the President to use at his discretion, over the objection of some Republican members.

The way was paved for speedy action on the naval phases of the emergency program as the House approved a resolution recalling the $963,000,000 regular naval supply bill from conference. Plans call for cutting legislative corners by adding the $250,000,000 naval fund and the remaining $67,000,000 Presidential lump sum to this measure in the Senate after hearings before the Senate naval appropriations subcommittee.

After yesterday's conference with plane manufacturers, Secretary Morgenthau declared the Administration had "no disposition" to lower labor standards in connection with the defense program. Secretary Perkins, he said, had asked him whether such standards were to be sacrificed for increased arms production.

"In fairness to the airplane people," Morgenthau continued, "it ought to be said that none of them have asked for any concessions. So long as we have so many unemployed, I see no reason for lowering standards."

It was suggested, however, that some relaxation of the Walsh-Healy Act and other labor legislation may be necessary in special instances, such as the machine tool industry where a skilled worker shortage exists.

Some concern was shown in Congressional quarters over Army and Navy proposals to suspend Civil Service rules in hiring navy yard and arsenal employes. Capt. Charles Fisher, director of naval shore establishments, told the House Naval Affairs Committee, the proposal was necessary to prevent technically qualified "who are undesirable because of their un-Americanism" from being forced onto the Navy.

The aircraft meeting, Morgenthau said, was called to acquaint the manufacturers with some of the broader aspects of the program. He said the meeting was "very worthwhile" though several of the plane-builders were disappointed that a more concrete program was not offered by Administration chiefs.

Roosevelt Advisers Studying Economics of Nazi Victory

By George Bookman.

Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's highest advisers are drafting economic plans for this country based on the possibility that Germany may win the war. The Post learned yesterday.

The plans, it was learned, cover such important questions as:

What shall be done about the nation's gold supply if that metal is repudiated finally as a currency base?

What shall be done about foreign trade if hostile powers control trade routes?

How shall strategic raw materials be obtained if distant supply sources fall into unfriendly hands?

What shall be done about business if America is forced into a self-contained economy?

The group doing the planning is the same circle of "liberal" economists, close to the President, who have provided the intellectual base for many of the reforms of the past seven years. The group has members in the Commerce Department, in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in the Interior Department, in the Labor Department and, most importantly, in the President's staff of personal advisers and assistants.

One concern is that a victorious Germany might build itself a trade empire covering all Europe, a vast, populous region trading internally but buying nothing outside its boundaries except absolute essentials.

Great Britain now is the best foreign customer of the United States, and Europe takes far and away the largest percentage of American exports. If this rich market were walled up inside a German trade system, United States foreign trade, which supplied about 8 per cent of the national income last year, would be drastically cut. Many industries that live on foreign trade would be virtually wiped out.

Strategic materials are another major concern impelling quick planning. Of these, tin and rubber in the precarious Dutch East Indies are only part of the picture. The President's planners can foresee a totalitarian bloc including Germany, Japan, Italy, Spain and Russia that might refuse to sell to the United States such vital commodities as mercury, manganese, antimony and tung oil.

Several months ago Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, appointed a special expert to try to develop some of these and other strategic products in Latin America. That effort is now being speeded up.

Plans are being discussed to accustom the United States to a lower standard of living and smaller outlets for its industry, if war events force such a readjustment.

Into this planning enter such considerations as the role of labor unions, the practicability of rigid labor sandards, the wisdom of present Government policies toward industry, and the possibility of broadening the tax base.

To lay the groundwork of these studies, Secretary Hopkins has ordered the Commerce Department's staff of economists to begin a study of the effects on the Nation's economic life of the President's giant defense program. The results of the study are to be forwarded to the President.

Willkie Bids For 'Write-in' On N. J. Ballot

Declares He'd Like To Go on Stump Against Roosevelt

By the United Press

Somerville, N. J., May 20.—Wendell L. Willkie, utilities executive and darkhorse possibility for the Republican Presidential nomination, made what some political observers interpreted as a bid for New Jersey write-in votes in an address here today.

New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey is the only candidate on the Republican primary ballot for the Presidential nomination.

Several groups are urging voters to write in Willkie's name on the Presidential ballot tomorrow. Some of their leaders said a heavy vote for their candidate would be recorded in this manner.

Addressing a rally of 500 State G. O. P. leaders, Willkie said:

"I have been lured on to seek the Republican nomination for the Presidency by challenges emanating from Washington that men engaged in private business are not qualified for high public office.

"I am also lured on by the continuous hope that if I should be accidentally nominated, Franklin Roosevelt will be my opponent.

"I'd like to go out on the stump against Roosevelt and debate with him the subject of whether he has done a job for the United States as worthy as the one I have done for public utilities."

The utilities expert attacked New Deal defense efforts, and asserted:

"This present Administration has proved itself incompetent to defend us from ourselves. We dare not, therefore, trust it to defend us from strangers."

He offered two reasons for what he termed the failure of President Roosevelt "to get his money's worth for the $7,000,000,000 already spent on defense," and to put industry on its feet—"with all the rest of the money he has spent."

First, he charged, "in its pursuit of what is called 'liberalism' and 'reform' the New Deal thwarted the energies of private industry . . . it substituted for private enterprise a vast Government bureaucracy which undertook to tell us how our business should be run."

Then, he added, "feeding upon political preference and privilege, this bureaucracy developed within itself the inevitable forces of discord and disharmony."

McNutt Charges G. O. P. Is Trying To Adopt New Deal

Waterloo, Iowa, May 20 (AP).—Paul V. McNutt tonight accused the Republicans of trying to adopt the New Deal away from its Democratic Party parentage.

In an address prepared for the Iowa Young Democratic Convention here, the Federal Security administrator and Democratic Presidential possibility said:

"Essentially, what the Republicans propose is a change of Government and of party, based upon a Republican promise that if elected, it, too, will carry out the New Deal.

McNutt laid the farmers' troubles in large part to the "high protective tariffs that shelters manufacturing industries," and to alleged industrial price-fixing agreements.

"The millions of competing sellers of farm products are not in position to exercise such controls," he said.

Bill to Deport Bridges Passed By House Unit

Immigration Group Seeks Early Expulsion Of C. I. O. Leader

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The bill to deport Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader, which if passed will set a precedent in American legislative history, was approved in new and stronger form by the House Immigration Committee yesterday.

Brought out last week but called back by the committee for revision, the measure now provides for Bridges' ouster from the country "forthwith," irrespective of any existing law that might serve to delay the deportation. Bridges, C. I. O. maritime labor leader, is an Australian citizen.

In an effort to speed action, members of the Immigration Committee will appear today before the Rules Committee to ask that the measure be expedited to the House floor.

Representative Pogue (Democrat), of Texas, who offered the amendment adopted yesterday, said the committee had been unable to find a record of Congressional passage of any other bill providing for the deportation of a specified individual.

Thinks It's Legal

"But," he said, "special laws have been passed to permit individuals to remain in this country—irrespective of other legislation, and I don't see why it should be unconstitutional for Congress to act to deport an individual alien."

Asserting that Bridges is a "noted Communist," Representative Allen (Democrat), of Louisiana, author of the deportation bill, said yesterday that "this is a matter of national defense." He added that "legislation to protect this country from the enemy within should go hand in hand with legislation to protect the country from the enemy without."

Meanwhile, in the Senate, the La Follette bill to prevent labor spying and strikebreaking bogged down as Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, held the floor most of the afternoon in an attempt to tack antialien amendments on the measure.

Reynolds proposed that a limitation of 10 per cent be set on the number of aliens employed by persons engaged in interstate commerce, and that aliens who have applied for citizenship be given preference in the 10 per cent.

La Follette Won't Object

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, author of the anti-strikebreaking bill, pointed out that his committee had had no opportunity to study the effects of the Reynolds amendment, but he added that he would not object to it.

Another amendment offered by Reynolds, but subsequently withdrawn, would have required the fingerprinting of aliens.

The Senate will not revert to the La Follette bill and amendments until after passage of the Army appropriation, which comes up today.

A proposal for compulsory deportation of aliens convicted of a felony will be considered by the House Immigration Committee tomorrow. This measure, which would also require deportation of aliens admitting in writing that they are guilty of sabotage or espionage, forms part of a bill previously vetoed by President Roosevelt.

Supreme Court Rejects Appeal Over D. C. Tax on Intangibles

The Supreme Court yesterday refused to review a decision holding unconstitutional the District of Columbia's intangible personal property tax as applied to James J. Sweeney, Federal employe who maintains a residence here but claims Boston, Mass., as his legal domicile.

The Court noted that it had denied a review "in view of the fact that the tax is laid under a statute which has been repealed and the question is therefore not of public importance.

"The court was quite right," declared Elwood Seal, Corporation Counsel, who directed the appeal, "in saying the case was brought up on an act of Congress which has been repealed and consequently has no effect on the present income tax law. The question involved on the income tax will have to be taken up separately."

The District government appealed from the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. That court ruled that Sweeney's domicile was in Massachusetts and that therefore he was not subject to taxation in the District.

Sweeney was assessed 86 cents as an intangible personal property tax for 1938 and 93 cents for 1939. He paid the taxes and sought a refund. The Board of Tax Appeals ruled against him, but the board was reversed by the Appellate Court.

The District government contended Sweeney has lived in Washington since 1919 and is taxable here.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, the Public Library presents a concert of chamber music Monday night in the Georgetown Branch. Artists: Louis Potter, piano; Milton Schwartz, violin; Howard Mitchell, violoncello. Program: Trio in B flat major (Mozart), Trio in D major (Beethoven), Trio in B minor (Turina).

Those who braved a torrential thunderstorm last evening for the sake of music enjoyed a delightful concert in the pleasant surroundings of books, flowers and a room with a view. The setting was the children's department of the Georgetown branch of the Public Library, made colorful with ferns and blossoming plants from the conservatory of Dunbarton Oaks, and between the movements of piano trios discoursed by Louis Potter, Milton Schwartz and Howard Mitchell one could gaze through open casements upon the lights of the city and the fitfully illumined hills of Virginia.

BROWN

The person probably most unhappy in being absent was Millard Taylor, concertmaster of the National Symphony Orchestra, who was prevented by illness from joining his colleagues in the performance of compositions he had rehearsed with them. His place was taken by Milton Schwartz, an experienced artist in chamber music, as is Howard Mitchell, first violoncellist of the orchestra. Louis Potter at the piano displayed admirably one aspect of the versatility which also makes him a fine organist and choral conductor.

Thoroughly enjoyable both for its content and for the persuasiveness of the performance, the program began with Mozart's B flat major trio composed in the autumn of 1786. Like the majority of his piano trios, this sparkling work was written neither for fame nor fortune, but for the enjoyment of friends at a party. The music is vivacious, happy even in the tender larghetto, and quickened by the animation of genial fancies.

Of more serious import was Beethoven's D major trio because of the second movement which contains in its minor mode such an atmosphere of mystery and uneasy premonition as to have gained it the nickname of "Geister." Across long stretches of tremolo, weird as a waste moorland at midnight, moves a slow, haunting theme that alternately whispers and keens a portentous message. The vague menace of the music may convey what Beethoven's sketch books seem to hint at—an impression of the witches in "Macbeth." Flanking this sombre scene are two swift movements quite unrelated to it, bright as sunlight and decisive in action.

The final work was the rarely heard B minor trio by Joaquin Turina, who shares with his contemporary magician, Manuel de Falla, the ability to project with entrancing effect the idiomatic musical speech of Spain. This charming trio, which owes some of its impressionistic tonal shimmers to the example of Debussy and Ravel, is alert with frequent rhythmic changes that pique one's interest and impart to the music an irresistible vitality.

1,424 Youths Spared Trials By Reform Law

Juvenile Court Kept Half of Cases From Bar, Judge Reports

The Juvenile Court was able to save 1,424 children the humiliation of being placed on trial in the first year in which it operated under recent reform legislation.

Judge Fay L. Bentley's report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, which was sent to Congress by President Roosevelt yesterday, recited many advances accomplished by the reform laws.

Informal disposition of certain types of cases was authorized by the legislation, and the 1,424 cases settled in the first year without court trial came to nearly as many as the total of cases tried, which was 1,535.

Judge Bentley said the new provision that all juvenile cases be investigated by social workers before anything was done had made it possible for the court to adopt much more enlightened policies.

The investigation assures the court of full knowledge of the social needs of children brought before it, brings about a closer relationship between the court's social workers and community agencies, and relieves the judge of much sociological investigation, so that she had more time for her judicial duties, the report said.

The youngest offender to face the court in the year was a boy under 7, whose problems were settled without a trial. However, one boy between 7 and 8 years old was placed on trial. More boys were charged with stealing than with any other crime, there being 722 theft cases. Most common charge against girls was that they were ungovernable, given to disobedience and late hours, 130 being tried on this charge.

Boys were delinquent in greatest numbers between the ages of 15 and 17, the total for this age group being 474. The "worst" age for girls was 16 to 18, total being 427.

The court collected $228,416.24 durthe year, most of which was paid out again to wives and children of persons brought before the court for nonsupport. Only $972 was collected in fines.

Mrs. Roosevelt Not Alarmed Over the War

A program of preparedness in this country means higher taxes and a "greater self-discipline" on the part of citizens, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday at her press conference.

Declaring she was not alarmed by the war, the First Lady said that Americans had hoped it would not be necessary to meet force with force. She added: "Force now seems rampant and successful . . . I have never felt we could not meet whatever we have to meet in this country."

Commenting on Col. Charles A. Lindberg's recent radio speech, she pronounced the first parts of his address "excellent." The conclusion of his speech she termed "unfortunate."

Mrs. Whitney Wins Divorce

MRS. ELIZABETH WHITNEY, of Warrenton, Va., was yesterday granted an uncontested divorce decree at Carson City, Nev., from her wealthy sportsman husband, John Hay (Jock)' Whitney. She declined to make any statement concerning the divorce. A property settlement January 3 of this year was approved and adopted

House Passes Bill For Virginia Highway

By the Associated Press

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a bill authorizing the Navy to convey to Virginia a strip of land 100 feet wide across the Naval Proving Ground at Dahlgren, Va., to be used as a right of way for State highway 207. It would replace the old right of way, considered dangerous from bomb-testing operations.

Dozenberg, One-Time U. S. No. 2 Communist, Tells What He Knows of Fifth Columns Today

Nicholas Dozenberg, erstwhile No. 2 Communist in the United States, who masqueraded for 11 years under another name, married a Washington nurse, sold American cameras abroad and was all the while a spy for the Red Army, returned to Washington yesterday.

He spent last night, not at his former apartment at 3700 Massachusetts avenue northwest, but in a cell at District Jail. Today at 10:30 a. m. he will appear before the Dies Committee Investigating Un-American Activities to tell what he knows of "fifth column" threats to this country.

Unless his testimony requires the committee's entire day, he will be followed on the stand by Marvin Rathbone, president of the American Communications Association, a C. I. O. affiliate. Rathbone, accused by a Dies Committee witness last month of being a Communist, will appear at his own request to answer the charge.

Dozenberg, known to his friends here, his business associates and even to his wife as Nicholas Dallant, pleaded guilty in Federal Court in New York March 28 to having used passports obtained by fraud.

Married in China

When he was arrested at Bend, Oreg., last December, his wife, Mrs. Frances Davis Dallant, a nurse employed by the Social Security Board, said she knew nothing of his Communist Party connection and did not know his name was Dozenberg.

They were married four years ago in China, where Dozenberg, as Nicholas Dallant, represented an American camera firm. She met her future husband, whom she believed a successful businessman, while a student at Columbia University. They have a child 2 years old.

A small, slight man, who peers nervously through horn-rimmed spectacles, Dozenberg was returned to Washington for the Dies Committee from the House of Detention at New York, where he is serving a term of a year and a day for the passport fraud, by arrangement with the Department of Justice.

Born in Latvia

Shortly before Dozenberg was sentenced, Representative Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, a committee member, charged six postponements of sentencing had been "arranged by the New Deal" to prevent his testifying. He is a "key witness," Thomas said, "in one of the most startling exposes ever to come to the attention of the committee."

NICHOLAS DOZENBERG

Dozenberg was born in Latvia and was naturalized in the United States in 1911. The Government charged he gave his passport and naturalization papers in 1921 to Earl Browder, secretary of the Communist Party in this country, for a trip to Russia. He was prominent in the party until 1928, when he abruptly dropped from notice.

Members of the United States district attorney's office in New York said Dozenberg continued as a member of the party, as its chief propagandist in the United States and as an agent of the G. P. U. Dozenberg told it differently.

"I quit the Communists in disgust," said he. "I gave up the whole idea. I was sick and tired of it and I wanted to run a grocery store."

Italy Speeds War Preparations; Anti-Allied Rioting Flares in Rome

Blackouts Ordered in 5 Major Cities

Entry in Conflict Feared Imminent; Frontiers Bolstered

By Richard G. Massock.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, May 20.—Italy swung her war preparations into a new high speed tonight as the feeling grew stronger in many Italian minds that her entry into the conflict merely was a matter of time and new demonstrations against Great Britain and France broke out.

Solid ranks of troops and carabinieri were kept on duty all night around the French and British embassies and the British consulate after preventing anti-Allied demonstrators from reaching the buildings.

The war department ordered three days of air raid drill and blackouts in Rome province as well as Terni, 45 miles northeast, where great arms and munitions factories are running full blast.

Nothing developed to indicate whether general mobilization was immeinent, but military experts said the closing of schools May 31, two weeks ahead of schedule, would make buildings available for temporary barracks if needed.

Premier Mussolini received a report from Marshal Pietro Badoglio on troops posted on the frontier. It followed a report last week on the Littorio Line of fortifications in the north, which Il Duce ordered further strengthened.

Blackouts Ordered

Whether an Italian move would come on the French frontier or on the eastern borders facing the Balkans was a secret likely to be learned only after such a move was made.

Air raid drills and blackouts were ordered to start tonight in Terni, Rome, Milan, Turin and Genoa, to continue for three days.

From the Piazza Venezia, where Premier Mussolini failed to appear in response to cries of "Duce, Duce," the crowd separated and headed for the British and French diplomatic establishments, seizing flags from buildings as they went.

Foreign Minister Count Ciano's speech in Milan yesterday left Italians expecting Mussolini to rally them suddenly some day to hear their army was on the move—just as he did when he launched the conquest of Ethiopia.

Count Ciano said Italy awaits only the "order or the day" from Il Duce "when he will have decided upon it."

Going to Albania

The Foreign Minister tomorrow will go to Albania, Italy's Balkan outpost. Frien is said he intended to inspect public works which were started after Italy occupied Albania, April 7, 1939.

Meanwhile, many Americans made their plans to leave Italy. A large number of priests and nuns reserved passage on the liner Rex which will sail from Genoa May 29. American authorities estimated there are only about 550 United States citizens in Italy who likely would require to be taken out, with some 1,500 more Italian-Americans probably choosing to remain.

Beirut, Lebanon, May 20 (AP).—United States Consul General E. E. Palmer tonight advised Americans in Lebanon and Syria "to give careful thought to the advisability of returning to the United States with the least possible delay."

Alexandria, Egypt, May 20 (AP).—Americans were advised today by the United States Legation to leave Egypt "while there still remains an opportunity to do so," because of the possibility of the war spreading to the Mediterranean area. There are approximately 900 Americans in Egypt.

Nazis Fortifying Narvik Railroad

Stockholm, May 20 (AP).—German troops defending the Norwegian ore port of Narvik from Allied attackers tonight were reported erecting fortifications along the Narvik-Kiruna, Sweden, railroad for a last stand.

(In London, a British dispatch said the Swedish radio had announced that a Polish unit captured the southern side of Narvik Fjord.)

Meanwhile, Sweden denied officially that the Reich had demanded permission to pass supplies and troops through northern Sweden to aid her Narvik unit.

The Army Air Corps yesterday began the transfer of four officers and 315 enlisted men of the Twenty-ninth Bombardment Group from Langley Field, Va., to the newly constructed Southeastern air base at MacDill Field, near Port Tampa, Fla. Reynaud to Declare Unity of Purpose With British Today

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, May 20.—Premier Reynaud's decision to try new men and new methods is in full swing. It is true that some of his new men like Marshal Philippe Petain and Gen. Maxime Weygand are old men but their appointment has meant a fairly clean sweep of the younger men who are held responsible for the failure to hold the frontier at its most vulnerable spot.

Today, too, it became clearly obvious that new methods are in full operation. Georges Mandel, now minister of the interior, is also at work in the old Clemenceau way. All over the city special police squads cleaned up cafes and hotels. Definite orders were given halting the flow of refugees and checking that movement of flight which last Thursday especially crept into high places and caused much panic.

The army already has felt the firm hand of Gen. Weygand in control. It knows that it will not be asked to do the impossible but that it will be expected to stand and return blow for blow to halt the avalanche that has broken through between the Moselle and the Scheldt and run out as far as the valleys of the Aisne, the Oise and the Somme.

Post Suppressed

In the announcement of Gen. Weygand's appointment it is made clear that by virtue of a separate decree "the post of commander-in-chief of the land forces is suppressed." That official phrasing marks one of the many changes that have been made during these last 48 hours when good men have been pushed forward and those who failed have disappeared.

In civil government the same process has been quickly operated by Mandel with the consequence that there has been already a change in the outlook and the spirit which will probably be given expression when Premier Reynaud goes to the Senate tomorrow to make a statement which is expected to contain a declaration of complete unity of purpose and fate with Great Britain, putting an end to reports of soundings from the German side as to the possibility of separate peace.

There was a cabinet meeting, this evening, at which future French policy was discussed.

Sugar cards, it was announced, will shortly become necessary. The Premier's office also issued a warning against the spread of false news and panic evacuation, without official order. Workers who desert factories will be considered as guilty as soldiers who desert from the front.

After Reynaud's statement in the Senate tomorrow, Parliament will be adjourned, sine die, and the government and fate of France will be, to all intents and purposes, in the hands of three men—Premier Reynaud, Vice Premier Marshal Petain and Generalissimo Weygand.

lengthening lines of communication, appeared to be slowing down the German advance, the general staff said. (Here 20 words were censored.)

French military advices said an extreme advance German motorcycle squad touched Peronne—15 miles west of St. Quentin and westernmost point reached by a Nazi force—yesterday but withdrew at nightfall to avoid being cut off. (Here 15 words were censored.)

The picture of the fight in the St. Quentin area is "confused," a War Ministry spokesman said. He acknowledged that St. Quentin "certainly has been taken" by the Germans and said Peronne is "perhaps held by light elements" of the Nazis.

Fighting also continued around Caudry, 18 miles north of St. Quentin, but the important town of Cambrai, 10 miles northwest of Caudry, still was held by the French, the spokesman asserted. La Fere, the south end of the sector, remained in French hands, and the French counter-attacked from that base.

Thousands of vehicles, ranging from motorcycles to giant tanks, streamed into the modern mechanized cavalry battle.

French and British motorized divisions, held in reserve when the Germans broke through the Meuse front last week, rumbled up to meet the Nazis' armored forces.

The Germans, stronger in number, still were rolling ahead, but the Allies were striking and then withdrawing to escape the heavier Reichswehr weight.

Swarms of French infantry, being regrouped under General Weygand, massed around the widening German salient which now bulged (here nine words were censored) near St. Quentin and at its bases at Maubeuge, to the north, and Sedan to the south.

Germans attacked at two points in the Rethel sector on the southern flank of the "bulge" (here five words were censored) and crossed the Aisne River, where the new French lines defending the capital had been erected.

The French in converging counterattacks reported, however, that they had blasted away the German bridgeheads and captured two "detachments" of prisoners.

Another German attack was launched farther east in the Montmedy sector—where the so-called "Little Maginot" Line facing Belgium joins the original Maginot Line—with heavy artillery preparation followed by waves of infantry.

After submerging one small advanced pillbox, the French reported, the German attackers were beaten off by the crossfire of the Maginot Line, leaving their dead piled high in front of the main forts.

At 5200 Eads street northeast, an Eleventh Precinct scout car removed a couple from a hummock in the street surrounded by raging water. A family marooned in a home at 5221 Clay street northeast was rescued.

Firemen of No. 27 Engine Company, under Capt. William C. Rees, tossed a line to the porch of 800 Forty-fourth street northeast and took off two women unable to make their way across the swift current. They were Miss Eleanor Taber and Miss Marie Collins.

Helpless in their automobile at Minnesota avenue and Dean street northeast, while the water rose rapidly, Alexander Barnes, of 1104 Forty-second street northeast, and Mary Jones, of 1804 Sixteenth street northwest, were carried to safety.

Families were evacuated by firemen from 5221 Clay street northeast and 5200 Eads street northeast. At 5921 Clay street northeast, George Jannifer was rescued when boards were flung across from the adjoining house. Norman Pyles, of Landover, Md., was taken from his stranded automobile at Minnesota and Dean avenues.

The Massachusetts avenue underpass in Rock Creek Park was flooded, and at Thirteenth and Taylor streets northeast and Twenty-second and Varnum streets northeast, manholes were blown from storm sewers by terrific water pressure. Firemen were called to chop away trees which had fallen across streets in the northwest section.

In addition to the British, they appraised the Allied strength in their path through Belgium as roughly more than 1,000,000 French and 250,000 Belgians.

[The United Press quoted unidentified "German military sources" to the effect that an operation had been completed in northern France which, if verified, would mean the surrounding of the Allied troops in Belgium. Although the guarded German claims did not say so, such an operation only could be that German units had reached the English Channel, possibly in the region of Abbeville south of Boulogne. Otherwise the Allied forces would not be surrounded and would have an open escape into France. There was no official announcement of this claim.]

Combined French-Belgian forces strongly counterattacked on the old Somme battlefield, soaked in the blood of both armies in 1916, but the Germans said they had driven back the Allies despite a tank onslaught between Cambrai and Peronne, about 20 to 30 miles northwest of St. Quentin.

The French not only were resisting in that sector, the Germans acknowledge, but the French-Belgian army facing entrapment in the "Sack" in Belgium by the Nazis' westward thrust to Tournai, also had tried to make a stand between Valenciennes and Maubeuge, near the Belgian border. There, too, the effort failed, the Nazis said, and the French-Belgian Allies headed westward to try to get around the German spearpoint already between them and Paris.

The high command earlier had reported a withdrawal of these forces between Valenciennes and Maubeuge while the British fell back toward the Channel ports under forced march with the Germans in pursuit.

Evidently in an effort to relieve the pressure on the Somme and to gain time for a withdrawal from part of Belgium, the French earlier today attacked with tanks north of Laon, on the south edge of the "bulge to St. Quentin."

The Germans however, said this attack was repulsed by Nazi planes. Apparently the German counterattack following the break-up of the French assault, was the one which carried the Nazi flag to Laon and beyond.

Fighting still was progressing on the southern flank of the narrow Nazi thrust between La Fere and St. Quentin, but the pace in this direction slowed down as the drive evidently veered westward through Cambrai.

Latest authoritative German reports today gave the front line approximately as follows:

From Dutch-Belgian border at the mouth of the Sheldt River southward along a line running just west of Antwerp and following the Scheldt and Dendre rivers before they reach Ghent; then west almost to Audenarde (which is south of Ghent and west of Brussels); then to east outskirts of Tournai, east to a point immediately north of Mons and then farther east across Jumet and Chatelet, the latter about 6 miles east of Charleroi.

Then southwest over Nalinnes and Beaumont to Avesnes, northwest to Lequesnoy, then to east outskirts of Cambrai, south to Peronne (northwest of St. Quentin), southeast through La Fere and Laon, southwest to the Oise-Aisne Canal, approximately 10 kilometers (slightly more than 6 miles), then east through Rethel, Montmedy and Longwy and along the Luxembourg border to the West Wall.

On the Cambrai advance, the well informed Hamburger Fremdenblatt commented, depends much of the future course of the conflict.

It called this a war of "breathtaking maneuver," and said it resulted from the breakdown of France's fortifications along the Belgian frontier, which let the Germans plunge almost half way to Paris.

That the Germans sped so deeply into France despite the large Allied armies on both flanks was considered in Berlin as evidence of their reliance on their air force and armored divisions. Their extremely narrow line easily might have been pinched off with heavy losses except for this seemingly overwhelming superiority.

But even as the main theater of war shifted to the Cambrai sector, fighting continued in Belgium.

All inner forts at Liege have been taken by the Germans and all but one at Namur, the high command claimed.

Nazi-Hungary Pact Signed, Tokyo Hears

Passage of Troops Will Be Permitted, Report Indicates

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, May 20.—Germnay and Hungary signed a military agreement in Berlin, May 14, it was reported here tonight.

Hungary is said to have agreed to permit the passage of German troops through its territory, and Germany is said to have promised to restore Hungary's former possessions in Czecho-Slovakia and Yugoslavia, and to cooperate in the construction of a greater Hungary.

This news reached Tokyo from "reliable sources in Berlin," believed here to be the Japanese military attache.

Budapest, May 20 (U.P.).—Russian troop movements involving "several divisions" occurred during recent hours in the vicinity of Rumania's Bessarabia and Hungary's Carpatho-Ukraine, usually well informed quarters understood tonight. The reports were not denied in Russian circles here.

The impression prevailed that Russia may be maneuvering for immediate intervention should the war spread to the Balkans.

Nervousness regarding future prospects for southeastern Europe continued, particularly in Rumania and Yugoslavia, according to information from the capitals of those countries. Here there was a feeling that the next week or ten days may provide an answer to the question of whether the war will reach the Balkans soon.

Hungary continued military preparations. Official quarters said, however, that "only military measures usual for the month of May are involved."

Indicative of the general situation in Hungary, the war office issued new regulations making compulsory the construction of bomb-proof cellars in new buildings and setting up an air raid precautions organization in Budapest. Citizens were advised to obtain gas masks.

contact general headquarters so quickly did it move.

The scene there was in marked contrast to that at Sternockerzeel, the Belgian castle of the former Empress Zita, the pretender, Otto, and others of Zita's numerous family. The British had made the castle a divisional staff headquarters, which prompted the Germans to bomb it.

The bomb dug a hole 30 feet deep beside the massive structure. The repercussion blew off part of the roof while everything within was thrown together in confusion.

Otto's shaving outfit was superimposed on the grand piano. Hungarian newspapers and costly French prints were jumbled together.

"Suppose He Talks Yankee"

Wandering from one desolate room to another, I found in Zita's boudoir the carbon copy of a letter she had written in French to a relative.

She observed "as you saw in the papers, Otto has gone to America." Of Otto's brother, Felix, also in America, she wrote, "I suppose he talks Yankee."

The scene at the castle was one angle of the kaleidoscopic view of the battle-scarred area.

We had no reason, however, to regret a slight loss in time, for what we saw was a human drama of the misery and horror wrought by modern warfare.

More than a day in a speedy automobile, over the abandoned battleground, was a revelation.

The contrast of Louvain, shelled and scattered, with Brussels practically unhurt, stands out in my memory.

But I also cannnot forget that group of 25 to 30 English Tommies whom we encountered almost as soon as they were captured.

Tomorrow, however, we are to be back at the front, closer than ever to the fierce battle.

Col. Gen. Walther von Reichenau asked us to visit him in the late forenoon tomorrow. When we inquired whether he was near the front, he replied significantly, "quite near."

Reichenau achieved fame as a tactician in the Polish campaign.

From what I have beheld, it is evident that Nazi Germany's tremendous air force dominates the fighting in Germany's blitzkrieg attempt to bring France and Great Britain to their knees.

Regiment after regiment of infantry, detachment after detachment of well-nourished cavalry, and seemingly inexhaustible reserves of air force and artillery poured into the operations area.

Main connecting roads from Germany, via Holland, and in the conquered sector of Belgium toward western Belgium and northern France, were jammed.

In this endless march I noticed how many Belgian and Dutch private cars now bore German troops. In other words, the machines were requisitioned. I also noticed in various villages that horses were being taken for German war service.

As we left Louvain and motored toward Brussels we saw that same sad trek homeward of dejected civilians who had fled from Louvain before the fighting started. It was the same old refugee story—babies fastened onto baskets on bicycles on which papa also had loaded bedding and other necessities.

Some Villages Unhurt

We passed through villages, lying on the direct line of march of Belgian troops retreating from east of Louvain and later from Louvain to Brussels, where there was not the slightest indication of damage. In others, where the Belgians had made a stand, the villages were given the same devastating treatment as befell Louvain.

We heard first-hand accounts of the terrifying effects produced by bombs thrown by Stukas (dive bombers). On some streets there was not a dwelling which had escaped damage.

Now and then, a saint's picture would protrude from a bit of wall on the second story which had not crumbled. We gazed into shattered rooms where only a bridal couple's photograph remained to adorn a bit of jagged wall. Somewhat suggestive of the whims of hurricanes, sometimes a grand piano, undamaged, would stand out in the midst of wreckage.

Blasting at everything in the path of Fuehrer Hitler's mechanized warriors and infantry, Marshal Goering's air legions are Germany's aces.

Here is a general idea of how the Germans operate:

An air squadron first determines where enemy troops are moving. It learns exactly the strength of the enemy's forces, their equipment, types of weapons and other details.

With these tips, reinforced by photographs, the Stukas, followed by heavy bombers, dash upon the enemy. They smash towns, if necessary, through which troops are pushing, demolish railroads, telephone lines and industrial plants and destroy marching columns.

The air information service tells the mechanized units where the bombing has been successful and, with terrific speed, these forces dart into the face of the confused enemy. Mobile land units follow through. Then the main army is ready to occupy the positions.

48-Hour Onslaught Required For Nazis to Take French Fort

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 20.—A 48-hour onslaught was required to take Fortification 505 in the Maginot Line northwest of Montmedy, DNB official German news agency, disclosed today.

An infantry battalion and heavy artillery with guns of the largest calibre participated in the attack on 505 while engineers blasted the fort's turrets.

(The French deny that fortification 505 is an important Maginot Line unit, referring to it as an outpost, not part of the main line.)

DNB said the infantry prepared the way by beating down opposition in the village of Villy. House to house fighting took place in the village, DNB reported, because these structures are built as pillboxes.

The artillery laid down a cruel fire along the 1-mile approach to the fort from the village. Engineers and infantrymen then worked their way slowly to the hill upon which the fort stands.

Finally, DNB related, "Forward march" was ordered.

A "blind corner" in the fort from which defense fire could not be directed at the attackers was reached by one detachment that had fought its way forward by crawling in and out of shell craters.

In the "blind corner" a heavy explosive charge was set off. The DNB report said the charge was so well-placed that "the steel top of a turret—2 meters (about 6½ feet) in diameter and 30 centimeters (about 1 foot) thick—was raised about a meter (39 inches) out of its anchorage and then fell back diagonally on its support, making an opening in the turret for an additional heavy load of explosives."

Nazis Oil Tanks Fired, British Claim

Five German bombers were downed from one formation. Another pilot disintegrated three Messerschmitts in quick succession.

Yesterday one squadron of Hurricanes attacked a hundred Germans. In a series of single combats they got 11, eight of which were fighters. One pilot took on four Heinkels one after another and got three of them. Thirty enemy aircraft were destroyed yesterday and many others damaged. Fourteen British fighters were missing.

Further details of Saturday's raids against storage tanks at Hanover and the railroad junction at Cologne are available today. Daylight raids with the object of impeding reinforcements moving to Landrecies in the battle bulge, produced direct hits on a motorized column, warehouses and tracks. The attacks were delivered from 1,500 feet in the teeth of pom-pom rifle fire and attacks from German fighters.

Night raids were made against storage tanks at Misburg, Bridges, Gemblous, Givet, Dinant and Namur. Seven bombs fell diagonally across one target, producing three big explosions and several fires. A bright moon and clear sky assisted the operations.

Meanwhile other operations went on against junctions in western Germany. Aircraft returning home reported that oil tanks in Bremen, bombed Friday, were still alight.

[Evidence in Berlin that the Allies' position might be improving slightly was seen in the German high command reports about a four-to-one German advantage in air losses—141 against 31 yesterday—as against six-to-one in the first days of the drive.

[Allied night raids over Germany were dismissed as planless and unimportant militarily, but a spokesman reiterated Berlin's warnings of grim German retaliation which, he said, will follow.]

London, May 20 (AP).—The British troops in Belgium today were reported dropping back because of the westward drive by the Germans in northern France.

A military official described the western front situation as "grim" and said the British were retiring in Belgium to keep the German St. Quentin push from driving a wedge between the British and Belgium troops and the French army.

The spokesman said the German thrust was not packing as heavy a punch as at the start. He praised the Belgians as fighting magnificently and declared there was no break through their lines. He added that the important centers of Liege and Namur—islands of Belgian stronghold in the midst of German conquest—still were holding out.

In speaking of the British withdrawals, the spokesman asserted no gap had been punched in the Allied front.

"Every time the Germans have met our boys they have gotten a bloody nose," he said.

Escort Ship Lost

The admiralty disclosed the loss of the escort ship Whitley, a 1,090-ton converted destroyer, which it said had been bombed and subsequently beached.

As Germany's thrust to the west heightened the danger of a direct attack on England, public buildings were guarded, roads were carefully watched and a part-time minute-man army was trained to combat parachute invaders.

As a further precaution against any "fifth column" of German sympathizers behind the home front, the government deprived aliens the right to possess firearms or explosives without a special police permit. Only air rifles and air pistols were excepted.

Knitting Needles Hum on 'Bundles for Britain' After Headquarters Is Opened for District

Lord Lothian Pays Afternoon Visit To Inspect Branch

A sign, "Bundles for Britain," went up in a Connecticut avenue window yesterday, and immediately knitting needles began clicking over garments for England's fighting forces.

Mrs. Wales Latham, 29-year-old New York society woman, founder and president of the "Bundles for Britain" organization, came down to open its twenty-ninth branch here.

The headquarters at 1331 Connecticut avenue northwest, was considered officially open, when Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, came in the afternoon and inspected a long knitted "sea-boot stocking."

When the flurry over the Ambassador's call had subsided, a dozen women went back to their tasks of opening the office in space donated for the purpose, in a former decorator's shop. Mounds of wool thread formed the principal "furnishings" in the office. Gray and navy blue wool for sweaters for seamen. Lighter blue wool for sweaters for the air force.

"We have sent 12,000 garments since the organization was started in mid-January," Mrs. Latham said. "The most urgent need has been for warm garments for the men on trawlers and minesweepers in the icy waters of the North Sea."

The office here will be open daily from 9:30 a. m. to 6 p. m., with volunteer workers on duty. With the wool, knitters get instructions from the official patterns, Mrs. Latham asserted.

Among the persons on the sponsoring committee here are Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. George Garrett, Mrs. Chauncey Depew, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Alanson Houghton, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mme. Cantacuzene, Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Miss Virginia Livingston Hunt and Mrs. Frederick Keep

3,000,000 Refugees Jam French Roads

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, May 20.—There are more than 3,000,000 Belgian and French refugees on the roads of eastern France pouring slowly westward and southward to escape the terror of war. Nothing so pathetic on such an enormous scale has ever happened before in the world's history.

The refugees who flooded into northeastern France from Belgium were hospitably received by the people there, but just as the tide of arrivals began to slacken the German advance forced those who had been the hosts of yesterday to be in turn refugees crowding on the heels of these front ranks.

Either through terror or official evacuation order, the flood has kept increasing until now this vast homeless mass of millions filling the roads and railroads, moving in every kind of vehicle and on foot, has become to entangled and entangling that it can move no farther and is encumbering the roads needed for military purposes.

The immense pity of it cannot be written, for its drama is infinite. Babies in arms, men and women 80 and 90 years old, wives whose husbands are mobilized, invalids, and mentally deficient people are all mingled in that tremendous throng with their horses, their cows, their dogs, cats and even canaries and guinea pigs.

As they move they eat up their own supplies and devour the supplies of those into whose country they move. Where it will end no man can tell. Tonight Paris is as empty as it was in those first days of September when the war began.

Aviatrix Urges Noncombatant U. S. Women's Air Corps

By Inez Robb

International News Service Staff Writer.

New York, May 20.—Formation of a women's air corps, trained for noncombat duties behind the lines, was urged as a basic part of Uncle Sam's aerial defense program today by Jacqueline Cochran, outstanding woman pilot.

"Women not only have a place in the new program, but there is a definite need for them," said Miss Cochran, winner of the Bendix Transcontinental Race in 1938 and holder of several national and international speed records.

"As instructors, women fliers could perform a task of prime importance to the expanding air forces and, in turn, would free men pilots for other important tasks in the creation of a fighting force of 50,000 planes and pilots as suggested by the President," she said.

"Women have always been good teachers because we are patient. I earnestly believe a corps of women fliers competent to give preliminary instruction to the thousands of cadets necessary to man the increased air forces would be of invaluable aid. It takes lots of pilots and excellent ones to train students. If women fliers were recruited to give cadets the first 75 to 100 hours of instruction, it would free men pilots for the next stage, that of combat or tactical instruction.

"Then, after a student has mastered tactical procedure, he would be ready for instruction in instrument flying, navigation and radio. Again, there is every reason for competent women to teach these phases of aviation.

"Under no circumstances am I proposing that women be used to replace men, but to supplant them in a program which calls for speed, precision and intelligent cooperation on the part of those qualified to aid."

Germany has used her competent women pilots to train army recruits to the flying corps, Miss Cochran declared.

"Hannah Raitsch, a member of the German team which competed in the National Air Races in Cleveland in 1938, told me that she had trained 500 male pilots. I know she was an officer in the regular army air corps. A captain, I believe, but I can't be certain. I think America is overlooking a good bet in not training a woman's air corps for similar work."

Hitler Called 'Military Genius'

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, May 20.—Back from his western headquarters for a brief stay in Berlin, Marshal Goering today spoke to the German press on events since May 10, when the German drive to the west was launched.

The keynote of his speech was praise for the "military genius" of the Fuehrer, who, he said, drew up the German plans for the offensive in the west just as he developed the strategic outlines for the Polish and the Scandinavian campaigns.

"In his person," Goering stated, "are united a statesmanlike leadership as well as a gifted generalship. It is seldom in history that the wisdom of a statesman is so paired with the genius of a military leader. Germany was given such a personality once in Frederick the Great. In Adolf Hitler fate once more has presented us with such a genius."

This war, Goering explained, is a "total war" in which the home front participates just as the soldier. Germany at this critical hour, he said, is led by a statesman-soldier who makes both military and political decisions, thus uniting the leadership of the Reich in both these fields.

"The Fuehrer gives his fighting forces daily orders concerning advances, attacks and defenses. With lightning speed he changes the marching dispositions of armies and divisions, where necessary uniting their forces at the point where he plans a heavy blow.

"A long war council is unnecessary—his decisions are made lightning-like and with the same speed are converted into reality. He possesses in a measure seldom found the two vital prerequisites of a great general—an extensive knowledge of all things military, and a thorough knowledge of the psychology of the soldier."

Stimson's Counsel Opposes Road Through Estate

A local real estate firm and attorneys for Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, clashed yesterday at a hearing before the District Commissioners over proposals to extend Woodley road in the Cleveland Park section.

Value of the $1,000,000 Stimson estate, Woodley, at 3000 Cathedral avenue northwest, would be "seriously affected" by the real estate company's request to curve Woodley road from Cathedral avenue to Garfield street, instead of cutting straight through to Thirty-first street, the former Cabinet member's lawyers contended.

Because of plans for a subdivision in the area between Cathedral avenue and Thirty-first street, the Thomas J. Fisher Real Estate Co. asked the Commissioners to change their original plans to cut Woodley road straight through and instead, curve it around their property to complete the extension.

On the other hand, if Woodley road is curved around the proposed subdivision to join Thirty-first at Garfield, it would run directly through the Stimson estate, close to the mansion, itself, the Stimson attorneys declared.

Stimson and his wife, it was pointed out, have provided that upon his or her death, the 25-acre tract shall be turned over to the Massachusetts and the property Phillips Andover Academy in would be ruined for this purpose if Woodley road intersects it.

Meuse Battle Eclipses Last War in Fury

Hitler's Reich Doomed If Blow Fails, Says Eyewitness

[The following dispatch was written Thursday at Cambrai the day that town was bombed and the four last remaining correspondents in the battle area were forced to leave. Disorganization caused by the bombing and the progress of Adolf Hitler's hurricane battle delayed its transmission.]

By P. J. Philip.

Copyright by New York Times

With the French Armies near the Belgian Frontier, May 16.—The fighting of the past four days along the Meuse has surpassed in fury of attack and obstinacy of defense anything that took place in the last war, even at Verdun, according to officers who fought in that other war.

"More ruthless than fire or flood," one officer described the torrent-like advance of the German panzer armored divisions. Sometimes they have been driven back, more often they have found their way like, fire and flood, round the obstacle that opposed them. There were 30 in the fighting north of the Meuse in Belgium which came out of a wood to attack an Allied position. With 75s and antitank guns ten were disabled or entirely destroyed and the others turned tail.

But it has not always been like that. The number and size and even the armament of these panzer divisions of heavily armed tanks has surprised the French. They expected a great deal but not quite such a flood. On many of the tanks extra armorplate has been placed in these last months after careful calculation of how to resist the French artillery.

Use Old Formula

The plan of battle has been the same as in Poland, the same if one goes back far enough as when Attila came to Chalons-sur-Marne with his cavalry. The only difference is that now airplanes take the place of light cavalry; the tanks are the charging chariots.

The airplanes act just as the cavalry used to do with the lance and then wheel and use the saber. Now it is charge with bomb-diving down close over the defending troops, then wheel and attack with machine-guns.

That the Dutch and Belgian casualties were high is not surprising. There is little defense against such warfare except retaliation such as the French and British have been able to make, diving low in their turn over advancing German columns bombing, machine-gunning, killing without mercy, giving back hammer blow for hammer blow, in the cruellest of all wars

Tank for tank the French claim they equal the enemy but the attacker in such case has always the advantage. He can put his utmost and his best into one great concentration. It is a battle of all or nothing, all the strongest in men and material of the German army against two French armies of the many stretched along a long line. That should be remembered in any estimation of the chances of success or failure. If this hammer blow fails Adolf Hitler's Germany fails, for it cannot be repeated and the Allies will still have reserves.

Test Is Superhuman

But meanwhile the test is superhuman. These men who are fighting in France and Belgium are enduring such a battle as has never been fought before. For the most part it is men against machines for although the defenders also have airplanes and tanks, these are more effective offensive than defensive weapons.

In this war, artillery is playing a secondary role except for defense. The Germans are relying on their bombing squadrons and their tanks and the artillery they carry, more than on heavy guns. Behind the airplanes come the tanks, and behind the tanks the infantry, filtering in and occupying.

Often the confusion of these last few days has been enormous, the French at times still holding villages far behind the advancing motorized columns and often fighting their way out on the flank of the advanced. Many of the German tanks are armed with flame throwers, adding to the horror.

No one who has not been bombed and machine-gunned mercilessly for hours on end with only a few minutes respite can understand the strain and dread. Out of the clear sky they come, 20 and 30 at a time, charging at 200 and 300 miles an hour, dropping their bombs, crash, crash, crash, blowing men and materiel into the air. There is no time to succor the wounded, for in a minute the bombers will wheel and come back again, machine-gunning, and behind the next wave the tanks come lurching forward with flame-throwers, machine guns and shells.

Dispute Rages Over Civil Service and Defense Program

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

War Department legal talent and the Civil Service Commission last night appeared lined up on opposite sides in a dispute over methods for recruiting civilian employes for the national defense program.

Center of the reported dispute is a provision in the bill now before the House Military Affairs Committee, introduced by Chairman May to speed strengthening of the national defense.

It would permit hiring new employes for the War Department without regard to civil service requirements and rules, "as the Secretary of War may deem necessary."

Harry B. Mitchell, President of the Civil Service Commission, wrote House Committee members that his organization had already mapped plans to speed up civilian recruiting for any need of the military departments. He pointed out, it was understood, that the President had issued an executive order to permit lifting civil service rules for the emergency.

The President's order, signed last September, authorized the Commission "to permit an immediate appointment without regard to the competitive requirements of the Civil Service Rules in any case in which it appears that a public exigency exists which is directly connected with the neutrality of the United States or the preparedness program of the Federal Government."

President Roosevelt ordered that this power could be used "only under the most unusual and compelling circumstances." Employes appointed this way would not get Civil Service status.

Brig. Gen. L. D. Gasser, deupty chief of staff, yesterday told the House Committee that War Department attorneys thought it questionable whether the President could act without the proviso in the defense bill. He added that the War Department intended to work closely with the Civil Service Commission, and that the proviso would be used only when the Commission could not supply the Department's man-power needs.

The committee will question a member of the War Department legal staff today about the employment proposal.

While Commission members declined comment on the bill, it was understood that the Commission's staff has been on the lookout for any move that might bring politics into defense.

Chairman May said there was likelihood that the bill would be reported today. He indicated that the civil service feature would not affect the committee's decision on the bill, and pointed out that the War Department had always cooperated with the Commission.

May said the bill simply provided another remedy if the Civil Service Commission could not supply men for the War Department. "If they can get men through the Civil Service Comission, they should get them that way," he said.

He added that the committee has no intention to "scuttle the interests of civil service employes," nor does it want these interests "to scuttle national defense."

Gunther Meets Great New Demand With Amazing New Bottling Machines

Tremendous Demand for Gunther's here, and Increasing Orders from all over the Nation made these great new Bottling Machines necessary

BECAUSE of the increasing demand for Gunther's beer everywhere, we have now installed these remarkable new bottling giants to handle millions of bottles of Gunther's a week.

The fact that the dry beer-i-ness of Gunther's has won such acclaim—that an increasing demand necessitated these new bottling machines—means that Gunther's has earned the highest tribute a great beer could achieve—unprecedented public approval. It means that to the hundreds of thousands who have tasted this famous Baltimore beer, Gunther's is more than just an ordinary beer—it is beer that now ranks with the world's finest.

So to keep pace with this growing demand for Gunther's "Special Dry Lager," these remarkable bottling machines have been installed to help solve the problem of satisfying real beer lovers everywhere. Almost human in the amazing accuracy that belies their size, they fill, cap and apply the new labels and handsome foil tops in one continuous operation.

And still the popularity of dry beer-y Gunther's mounts . . . gains further triumphs. That's proved by sales, hitting new all-time highs for the 1940 season.

Almost everywhere, it seems, people who have tasted Gunther's beer want it . . . and real beer drinkers who have tasted it are adding to its fame.

Apostle Of Attack

The replacement of Marshal Gamelin by Gen. Weygand as commander-in-chief of the Allied armies constitutes an admission of the tragic failure of Allied military policy to date.

Believing themselves to be secure behind the Maginot Line, the Allies, for the first eight months of the war, were content to remain on the defensive. They hoped in that way to gain time which would enable them to close the wide and dangerous disparity between their own strength in the air and that of Germany. They placed their faith in the cumulative pressures of a steadily tightened blockade.

The invasion of Holland and Belgium and then France showed that they were living in a fool's paradise. Holland was overrun in five days; another five days saw the German armies on the road to Paris and the Channel ports. The defensive strategy of the Allies was thus suddenly transformed from a theoretical asset to an actual liability. The situation called for a drastic reversal of tactics. As Winston Churchill pointed out in his broadcast: "The armies must cast away the idea of resisting attack behind concrete lines or natural obstacles and must realize that mastery can only be regained by furious and unrelenting assault."

In the face of this need the Allies have turned to a man who is not only a brilliant organizer but a strategist of the pre-Maginot school of tacticians which valued offense above defense. Like his great commander, Foch, under whom he served, and with whom he collaborated, he believes that the road to victory in war is to "attack, always attack." It is a policy which the German army has pursued with remarkable success in this war and if the German drive is to be halted it will probably have to be by Allied application of the same tactics.

Gen. Weygand's appointment is reported to have strengthened the morale of the British and the French. This in itself is a gain. But whether Weygand, vigorous and resourceful for all his 72 years, can do what is expected of him remains to be seen. Even his appointment harks back to the World War at a time when the futility of World War strategy has been demonstrated.

The military position of the Allies has been gravely compromised by the events of the past 11 days. It is an open question whether they have the resources of air power and mechanized units to halt the onslaught of the German juggernaut. But both Great Britain and France have now manifested a determination to employ every resource at their command.

Pegged Prices

At the request of Secretary Wallace the Chicago Board of Trade has prohibited trading in grain futures below the minimum prices quoted last Saturday. This action was taken after a week of near-panic conditions in which precipitate declines occurred. Price pegging may be warranted as a temporary expedient until calmer judgments prevail in the speculative commodity markets, but obviously it cannot prevent political developments in Europe from having a depressing effect upon farm prices and farm income.

For a time the widening of the combat area in Europe added fuel to speculative fires. But with fuller realization of the adverse economic consequences of Germany's invasion of Holland and Belgium, the bubble was pricked.

There will be worse to follow if this speculative collapse should be made an excuse for squandering more money in an attempt to bolster farm prices. Senator Byrnes, for instance, is sponsoring a bill that would increase the borrowing power of the Commodity Credit Corporation by $500,000,000 to provide price-stabilizing loans on various farm products and to meet emergencies due to decreased agricultural exports occasioned by the war.

Before the war broke out subsidies had to be used to facilitate the movement of cotton and wheat into foreign markets, because CCC loans had raised prices above world levels. Hence, the Byrnes proposal would simply add to the existing obstacles in the way of exporting.

A year ago the borrowing power of the CCC was increased to $900,000,000. The Byrnes bill would advance the limit to $1,400,000,000. The capital of this lending agency has been twice wiped out and replaced by direct appropriation from the Treasury of $210,000,000. But these known losses take no account of the large potential losses on stored wheat, cotton and other commodities against which loans have been made to growers without recourse.

If the Byrnes bill should pass, another burden of indeterminate size, but unquestionably large, would be laid upon the Treasury. Moreover, the money spent would be worse than wasted in pursuance of a misguided effort to boost farm prices above levels warranted by conditions of demand and supply.

Speculative markets receive severe but salutary jolts at intervals when quotations are boosted without regard to the fundamental factors that determine prices. Nevertheless, the Government clings to an artificial system of price control miscalled stabilization.

Keystone Of Defense

War in Europe has brought the question of national defense close to the heart of every American. The necessity of consolidating our national strength to resist any possible attack has been accepted almost unanimously. Indeed, there is such general agreement on the subject that the complicated nature of the problem may not be fully appreciated.

Defense of the United States is not simply a matter of manufacturing guns, airplanes and other military equipment. In times of world crisis it is of great importance that we have an armed force on which the United States can rely to repel any immediate assault. Congress has been dilatory in equipping such a force and giving it the weapons essential for success in modern combat. Fortunately, Congress is now moving rapidly to correct this mistake.

Adequate defense, however, involves at least two vital factors in addition to trained forces and modern equipment. War machines can be no stronger than the economic systems supporting them. And even the strongest defensive force requires a background of international commitments that will permit it to operate effectively. While we proceed to strengthen our long neglected Army and National Guard, and to enhance our capacity for production of aircraft, these less obvious essentials to national defense should not be overlooked.

Ever since the Monroe Doctrine was proclaimed the United States has faced the enormous task of defending the Western Hemisphere. From the beginning that doctrine was based on considerations of national defense. Some degree of altruism, as well as imperialism, entered into the preservation of the doctrine through various periods. But in recent years it has become more specifically a foundation stone of our national defense system.

The key to defense of the United States is the Panama Canal. It is of the utmost importance to keep that waterway open to the American Navy and commercial vessels. In a very real sense it would become the lifeline of America in time of great emergency. That point stands out from the last annual report of the Secretary of War. He wrote:

> It is the simple, unadulterated fact that the range and destructive potentialities of weapons of warfare, primarily those whose realm is the skies, have, in recent years, so shortened the elements of distance and time that any hostile air base established anywhere within effective striking proximity to the Panama Canal would prove a vital threat to that waterway—and, therefore, a threat to the very security of these United States. In speaking, therefore, of hemispherical defense I am speaking, from the military standpoint, of the defense of this Republic.

The importance of safeguarding this region against possible air attack was once more emphasized in the address of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh on Sunday night. "An adequate air defense of the Western Hemisphere," he said, "necessitates the cooperation of the other nations of this hemisphere." At present we have no assurance that such cooperation would be forthcoming.

Substantial progress has been made by the present Administration in fostering a policy of solidarity among the nations of this hemisphere. At Buenos Aires and at Lima the American republics agreed to consult together in case of any threat against their peace. Under that agreement representatives of these countries met at Panama City last September and outlined a common policy regarding the European war. Important as these steps are, however, they give no assurance of effective joint action in the event of a foreign invasion of any part of Latin America.

The possibility of a German victory in Europe makes it imperative to tighten up the loose ends of our defense policy without further delay. The time has come to seek more positive agreements for defense of this hemisphere against aggression from any source. There are indications that the Central and South American republics are genuinely concerned over their future security. Since that concern is shared by the United States, it should not be difficult to negotiate more positive defense agreements.

There is no occasion for hysteria over a possible airplane invasion of the United States. But there is a real need for tightening up our lines of defense. And that need extends as certainly to the field of international relations as it does to the manufacture of proper equipment for the Army.

Two Needed Measures

Congressional absorption in the defense program should not lead to the sidetracking of the Ramspeck bill or the Hatch bill. The Ramspeck bill, blanketing into the civil service many Federal employes now exempt, has already passed the House and is before the Senate Civil Service Committee. The Hatch bill, prohibiting active participation in political campaigns by State and local employes paid wholly or in part from Federal funds, has passed the Senate but is being held up in the House.

The crisis in Europe is no valid excuse for failure to act on these two measures. Their passage would have a stabilizing influence upon the Federal personnel and upon public services financed from the Federal Treasury. Recent developments emphasize the importance of an efficient Government service based upon the merit system. Waste and inefficiency will inevitably be found so long as large numbers of Federal employes remain outside the classified services. And waste of Federal funds will also be encouraged if State and local governments are permitted to build up political machines with Federal aid.

According to latest reports, the Senate Civil Service Committee hopes to have the Ramspeck bill on the floor of the Senate by June 1. As passed by the House, the bill carries a rider of an utterly unacceptable character. The practical effect of this provision would be to deprive Federal employes from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, as well as a number of other States, of the benefits of the act.

It is expected that this proposal, obviously designed to sabotage the entire measure, will be deleted in committee. The Senate will then have to decide whether it is sufficiently interested in the cause of good government to speed the much discussed and long delayed Ramspeck bill toward passage.

The fate of the Hatch bill is also hanging in the balance because of the hostility of certain Congressmen who are unwilling to see local political machines deprived of the Federal funds. The Judiciary Committee, impressed by a storm of public disapproval, has voted to reconsider its tabling of the Hatch bill by secret vote, but has not reported the measure to the floor. In the circumstances, efforts to bring the measure before the House by petition should be pressed vigorously.

Both the Ramspeck and Hatch bills are nonpartisan measures which should meet with little opposition. Passage of these bills is not only in the interest of Government employes, but of concern to all Americans interested in better machinery of government.

Confusion Prolonged

Refusal of the Supreme Court to review the decision of the Court of Appeals for the District in the Sweeney case was based on the fact that the tax in question has been repealed. The high court saw no question of public importance in this particular legal controversy.

The effect of its ruling, however, is to leave the revenue system of the District in a serious muddle. For the doctrine laid down by the Court of Appeals in the Sweeney case is applicable to the present District income tax as well as to the old intangible property tax. In effect, the local government has been instructed that it cannot collect taxes based on domicile in the District from Government employes who claim legal residence elsewhere, even though they may have lived in Washington for 20 years.

Presumably a case involving the income tax will be carried to the higher courts as rapidly as possible. In the meantime, our local tax machinery will operate under a severe handicap. All hope that Congress would straighten out the tangle by clarifying the law has disappeared, so far as the present session is concerned. Washington will have to make the most of a crippled revenue system because Congress has refused to correct its own blunder in originally passing a vague and confusing income tax law.

It is unreasonable to expect Congressional action on local matters at a time of acute pressure for enactment of legislation of national and international import. But that very fact strengthens the case for a District government capable of handling local affairs with only general supervision from Congress. Bungling and ineffective government here must be expected so long as Congress retains the obligations of a city council—obligations which it cannot effectively discharge.

WPA Leave

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Social Security; what it does not mean to a certain class of WPA workers? After 18 months of continuous service, they are compelled to take 30 days' leave, without pay. Can you imagine what that means to a WPA worker, who has only earned $68 per month, which is barely enough to provide life's necessities? Yet he must keep up his expenses the best way he or she can during his enforced idleness, and lead a decent life.

No Social Security was provided for this class. What is the answer and who is going to worry about answering this vital question? It is frequently impossible for these WPA workers to find employment elsewhere. Congress passed this law which has forced this hardship upon these workers and who are now out of employment, without funds.

Who's going to answer this big question? A WPA WORKER.

Language And Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Through a widespread study of foreign languages in the schools of this nation educators have the opportunity to develop better international relations. Intolerance and prejudice are brought about for the most part only because persons do not understand each other's culture. Many persons don't know why they have a feeling of dislike for persons not of their own blood.

Why don't we, the people of the most progressive nation in the world, adjust our lives to get along with all peoples? We shall set the example and others will follow. The study of foreign languages taught by teachers who really are sympathetic toward the countries whose languages they teach, will be the first step toward adjustment.

Friends Of France

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The story in The Post of May 17 about Miss Anne Morgan and her American Friends of France unit being bombarded while evacuating a sector in northern France has aroused much response, and I am sure you will be interested in the following cable which I have just received from Miss Morgan:

"Our northern post quitted westerly direction. Excellent morale in spite of exhausting and heartrending condition. Desperate need immediate cash."

The Washington committee of the American Friends of France, Inc., is making great efforts to meet this pressing and tremendous need by raising an emergency fund for immediate transfer to France, and urges that contributions, no matter how small the sum, be sent as quickly as possible directly to the treasurer, Mr. Corcoran Thom, jr., Riggs National Bank, Dupont Circle, as the committee workroom on Connecticut avenue had already been closed for the summer.

The American Friends of France, Inc., will be most grateful for any help in doing its part to meet this desperate situation.

Call To Mothers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In her letter of May 1, O. J. W. of Capitol Heights, Md., voiced the sentiments of all the mothers I know. Local mothers of military-age sons should organize to actively oppose those "this-is-our-war" souls who are becoming so vociferous.

What I can't understand is why those people who feel this is their war don't avail themselves of the privilege recently extended them by Mr. Roosevelt and go to Canada to volunteer.

Probably if the truth were known the people who yell the loudest that we should be fighting are complacently sure that they and theirs won't have to do any of it. Before they try too hard to get the rest of us in they had better obtain and read copies of the Selective Service Act and the Industrial Mobilization Act, and learn for themselves that every male citizen between the ages of 18 and 45 will be required to register for service, and also that even boys of 16 and the womenfolk will have definite jobs assigned to them if and when the United States goes to war. Against Gambling

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my opinion, the numbers game and other forms of gambling and crime are on the increase rather than on the wane in the District of Columbia. It is high time for a forceful method to be taken to check this growing menace, for neither rich nor poor, old or young are immune from their activities. All too seldom it seems are they apprehended and brought to the bar of justice.

I believe I voice the sentiments of other citizens and property-owners of the District when I say some sort of action is imperative. If the the difficulty is a lack in police personnel, I think the Commissioners should request Congress to augument their department to a total of at least 1,800 men. I also believe that the courts should impose stiffer sentences and penalties on repeated offenders, for parole and leniency simply encourage them.

Congressional action should be prompt with legislation railroaded through for conditions certainly warrant it. HENRY F. ASH,
Washington, April 27.

For Senator King

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are most fortunate to have Senator King as chairman of our District Committee. He is so sincere in his interest for the welfare of our National Capital and for the District people. I have had numerous interviews with Senator King concerning appropriations for school, libraries, hospitals, and other civic matters and always found him deeply interested. Even when Senator King was confined to his bed with a broken ankle he continued to work for the District. I take this opportunity to thank Senator King and congratulate the people of the State of Utah in having Senator King to represent them.

A Practical Man

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What this country needs is a practical man for President like the men who developed and made this country great until the college theorists got control and ruined it. Theorists cause stagnation and unemployment and distress. The most patriotic thing this country could do would be to start a 60-day employment drive. Everybody could be put to work if this great patriotic drive was made with the motto, unemployment is America's greatest enemy—to deny a man the right to work is treason.

Who Reduced Lynchings?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The eagerness of Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames of the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching to claim credit for the South and her organization in the war against lynching is understandable, though there are many white Southerners, including members of the association, who do not think the problem of mob violence is as near solution as is claimed by Mrs. Ames in her recent statement that there have been no lynchings during the year that closed at midnight on May 8.

Mrs. Ames' claim is all the more extraordinary in view of the fact that Fulton County Grand Jury and the Federal Bureau of Investigation have turned up three mob murders by the Ku Klux Klan almost under the window of Mrs. Ames' office in Atlanta, Ga.

Last March 2 a young white woman by the name of Sarah Rawls and a young white man, Benton Ford, were beaten to death by a mob just outside Atlanta because they were sitting in a parked automobile. Five days later a 37-year-old white barber, Ike Gaston, was beaten to death by a Ku Klux Klan mob because he occasionally got drunk and beat his wife.

One wonders at Mrs. Ames' jubilation over what she terms a "12 months lynchless period," in the light of these killings.

Nor do the facts bear out Mrs. Ames' statement that we know more about lynchings nowadays and that fewer lynchings are hushed up. One of the most distinguished editors of the South recently stated that, with all the efforts of his and other Southern newspapers put forth, they do not know how many lynchings take place in the rural areas of the South. This editor adds that he knows many such cases never come to light.

Two other Georgia white women tell a different story in the current issue of the Georgia Review.

Apparently also Mrs. Ames does not know of the increased mob violence which is being practiced on labor organizers and on persons suspected of sympathizing with the efforts to unionize workers in textile and other plants which have been moving southward during recent years.

Finally, we cannot agree with either Mrs. Ames or The Washington Post that the reduction in the number of known lynchings is due solely to "the fruits of long years of campaigning to bring about 'lynch-consciousness.'" One of the chief factors has been fear by certain States that unless either lynchings were reduced or the news of lynchings kept from the public Congress would pass Federal legislation against this evil. If this were not true Senators Connally, Bilbo and Ellender would not filibuster so desperately against legislation to lend the weight of the Federal Government to that of the States in preventing lynchings and punishing lynchers—99.2 per cent of whom have gone scot free in the more than 5,000 lynchings since 1882.

Mrs. Ames does no service to the cause of ending lynching and the threat of lynching by glossing over the real facts. As Dean William H. Hastie said in a recent radio address, "Where millions can be intimidated only a few need be lynched to hold the rest in check."

Mr. Bundy's Emma

Mr. Bundy had disposed of most of the world's problems along with his six beers and was eying the waitress for another round when the newsboy came in.

"Give me three pennies," said Mr. Bundy, who rarely carries change with him, "and I will read tomorrow's collection of myths." It is Mr. Bundy's contention that there never was a war so badly reported, so he skipped the black headlines and flipped to the second page.

His beer hand stopped halfway up and his voice was sad when he spoke.

"Well, she's dead."

Nobody said anything, nobody was expected to, and Mr. Bundy waited until his pause had sagged.

"She was the greatest American who ever lived."

Mr. Bundy is no fence-sitter. He is a merchant of superlatives and at various times has announced, with equal certainty, that Alexander Hamilton, Ben Franklin (Mr. Bundy always refers to the great in the more intimate term), John Brown, Waldo Emerson, Chester Arthur, Stonewall Jackson, Frederick Douglass, Ethel Barrymore, Mrs. R., Admiral Farragut, Hugo Black, Roger Williams, Ethel Waters, Fanny Brice, Cordell Hull, Wendell Willkie, Dizzy Dean and Hinda Wassau, each in his or her own turn, was unquestionably, indubitably, and beyond argument, the greatest American who ever lived.

"Emma," and Mr. Bundy took a long, slow swallow of brew, "was a Woman." You could hear the capital. No one spoke. No one challenged him. Long ago we learned that all argument with Mr. Bundy was futile at such times as this.

"Damn them. Damn their blasted, blinded, blue-nosed souls." Mr. Bundy waved his glass in the air. "She was a saint. They're all saints. And what did they do to her? Chased her out like a common criminal, the damned little putrid patriots. Why, Emma Goldman was a better American than all the ratty red-baiting fools who ever draped the Stars and Stripes over their stinking stupidity. Why——" and Mr. Bundy glared at all possible nay-sayers—"they said she was a bomb-thrower, a vicious woman, a subversive influence.

"They hounded her out of America like a cheap lawbreaker. And then what happened? Hah!"

Mr. Bundy's voice rose. His red nose got redder and he was so angry he shouted.

"She took her dreams and her visions of a society of free men and women—anarchia, the end of all civilized efforts for a good life, the goal of the saints—she took 'em with her to Russia. Oh, she went away, all right. The dear old flag-waving fools got rid of her terrible influence, and the children of America were saved from a fate worse than death, and she went to Russia. To Russia, where everything was gonna be different, and might've been, too.

"And what happened? What happened, I'm asking you?"

No one was expected to answer. One word of reply would have risked Mr. Bundy's glass on the conk.

"She got over there where Joe and me and you was all equal and loving and free and what did she find? They had taken most of her friends and thrown 'em in jail or shot 'em! They were just as bad as the Stars-and-Stripes perverters, only worse, and maybe with more excuse. But there she was, expecting heaven and finding hell—all after her stay in purgatory over here."

Mr. Bundy finished off his glass and grew lyrical.

"Emma Goldman. Brave, honest, intelligent, beautiful—yes, I said beautiful," Mr. Bundy looked for a challenge, but none was forthcoming, "—beautiful in the only way anybody can be beautiful. There was only one Emma."

"Take the whole lot of 'em, these anarchists; they've got the only society worth living in, the only one worth dying for. And for what, I ask you? We crucify 'em, electrocute 'em, like Sacco and Vanzetti, harry 'em to bankruptcy, like they did William Godwin, drive 'em to suicide, like they did young Shelley, or chase 'em from shore to shore, from land to land, like they did Emma Goldman."

A shocked voice inquired if Mr. Bundy had joined the disciples of Bakunin?

"What?" Mr. Bundy was shocked at the impropriety of the question at such a time. "Of course not."

"I, sir, am a nihilist. I am opposed to successes, heroes and generals, particularly generals, until they are dead, that is. Then I revere them with the best of the grave-worshipers.

"You perceive that I am an honest man. As a heel I worship Emma Goldman for what she was, deep down and in her soul, a saintly woman, idealistic, gentle, fierce in the way of all minority believers, farsighted and right.

"That's what I like most about Emma. She was right. Her timing was bad, maybe a couple of thousand years off. But in the end she was right."

Mr. Bundy sighed, an honest, unpretentious, sorrowful sigh.

"Well, boys, that's over. Say your say. I'm a loud-mouthed, opinionated, beer-guzzling old flop who would like to be, if I dared, if I thought it was worth it, an Emma Goldman.

"I never will.

"Drink up, boys. The next round is on me." IAN LORD.

Disputes Old Chief

WOODROW WILSON, in the course of his speaking campaign of September, 1919, on behalf of the League of Nations, seasoned his remarks with some paragraphs which today are of more interest than they were then. Mr. Wilson, of course, had a dreamy faith in the pledges of nations and the efficacy of scorn, and his exhortations all rang with a rather querulous anger at those skeptical men who did not share his confidence and would not commit the United States to the responsibilities which he would have had the Nation assume. The wisdom or folly of his proposals can only be debated, never determined, but they were rejected by the people to whom he carried his case, who then, having made their decision, got plastered on jump-stiddy and kitchen gin and went lurching into the era of wonderful nonsense with a hey nonny-nonny.

On September 5, 1919, Mr. Wilson stopped at St. Louis and, in a speech at the Coliseum, said:

"What did the Germans do when they got into Belgium? Every piece of machinery that could be taken away was taken away. If it was too big to take away experts directed the way in which it should be injured so that it could never be used again, and this, because there were textile industries and iron industries in Belgium which the Germans hated the Belgians for having. This war, in its inception, was a commercial and industrial war. It was not a political war.

"VERY WELL, then, if we must stand apart and be the hostile rivals of the rest of the world, we must be ready, physically, for anything that comes. We must have a great standing army. We must see to it that every man in America is trained to arms. We must see to it that there are munitions and guns enough for an army that means a mobilized nation. That they are not laid up in store but that they are kept up to date, ready for use tomorrow. That we are a Nation in arms. Because you cannot be unfriendly to everybody without being ready that everybody shall be unfriendly to you. And what does that mean? Reduction of taxes? No. Not only the continuation of the present taxes, but the increase of the present taxes.

"And it means something very much more serious than that," he continued. "We can stand that so far as the expense is concerned, but, what is much more serious, we have got to have the sort of organization which is the only kind of organization that can handle arms of that sort. We may say what we please of the German government that has been destroyed, but it was the only sort of government that could handle an armed nation. You cannot handle an armed nation by vote. You cannot handle an armed nation if it is democratic, because democracies do not go to war that way. You have got to have a concentrated, militaristic organization of government to run a nation of that sort. You have got to think of the President not as the chief counselor elected for a little while, but as the man meant constantly and every day to be the commander in chief of the army and navy, ready to order them to any part of the world where the threat of war is a menace to his own people. And you cannot do that under free debate. You have the alternative, armed isolation or peaceful partnership."

IN DES MOINES, the next day, Mr. Wilson said:

"The isolation of the United States is at an end, not because we choose to go into the politics of the world but because by the sheer genius of our people and the growth of our power we have become a determining factor in the history of mankind. After you have become a determining factor you cannot remain isolated, whether you want to or not. Isolation ended by the processes of history, not by our independent choice."

And on September 12, at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, he said to the subjects of William E. Borah:

"You cannot trade with a world disordered, and if you do not trade you draw your own industries within a narrow and narrower limit. This great State, with its untold natural resources, with its great undeveloped resources, will have to stand for a long generation stagnant, because there are no distant markets calling for those things."

As to whether the alternative would have worked, there is no testimony but only opinion, but some of the prophetic phrases which the war President cried at an indifferent people about the whirl into a craze for rash and noisy pleasure, with appetites dominating all life, have now been upheld.

And, after 20 years, the next Democratic President in a war speech to Congress speaks from the neck and not from the heart when he says: "There are some who say that democracy cannot cope with the new techniques of government developed in recent years by a few countries which deny the freedoms which we maintain are essential to our democratic way of life. That I reject."

In rejecting that proposition Mr. Roosevelt, for once, disputes his old chief.

His words are recalled by Westbrook Pegler in connection with the present defense problem and President Roosevelt's remarks on that subject

Two Kids From Kansas

"SORRY TO BOTHER you, lady," said the man at the door in Independence, Kans., "but could you give a poor bum a cup of coffee?"

The lady looked again, and saw that the "poor bum" was her son, Martin Johnson, 18 years old, and just home from his first trip overseas. Someone in Chicago had bet Martin that he couldn't get to London and back on $4.25. He'd made Paris, too, fixing up a broken-down merry-go-round to pay his way. He couldn't speak the owner's language, but he knew machinery.

Two years later, a bit bored with apprenticeship in his father's jewelry shop, Martin read a magazine article telling how Jack London planned a seven-year round-the-world cruise in a 44-foot boat. One of the four members of the crew, the article said, was still unpicked, and would be selected on the basis of a good letter of application.

That night Martin Johnson's letter was put in the hands of the mail clerk, westbound.

Ten days later, Martin received his first telegram. "Can you cook? Jack London," it read.

After consulting Jess Utz, chef of Milton Cook's White Front Quick Lunch Room, who promised quick instruction, Martin wired back "Sure, just try me." He got the job.

Two years later still, after Jack London had sold the Snark and the famous expedition had blown up, Martin Johnson went into partnership with Charlie Kerr, Independence druggist, rebuilt the front of a store to represent the bow of the Snark, and set up as a magic-lantern lecturer, varying the 5-cent program with moving pictures and illustrated songs. Branching out, he toured other Kansas towns, and so came to Chanute, where a 16-year-old girl was somewhat bored by his talk about cannibals. She didn't like cannibals; she liked to dance and sing and roller skate. Two weeks later, visiting her friend, Gail Perigo, in Independence, she met Mr. Johnson; he took her to a roller-skating rink, but said he didn't skate. On Friday came a letter asking permission to call on Sunday and meet her folks. On the following Saturday Miss Osa Leighty was invited to sing, in place of her friend, Gail Perigo, in Mr. Johnson's Snark Theater. On Sunday morning, Martin proposed; that afternoon they were married.

"I Married Adventure" (Lippincott, $3.50), Osa Johnson calls the book in which she tells this story and its 20-year aftermath. It is an apt title.

It is a fantastic and winning story of two Kansas kids who made good. It is the Book of the Month Club's choice for June. The photographs of the Johnsons in the gaslight-and-pompadour age are, to my taste, even more revealing than those of the gorilla-and-lion days.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Reorganized Administration

THE IMMEDIATE and crucial problem of the United States is how to organize the government so that it will have the full confidence of the nation and the necessary authority. In analyzing this problem we must have continually in mind that time is the controlling element in the problem. There are three time-tables, all of which have to be remembered and none of which can be ignored: that of the war, that of our own politics, that of our defense.

THUS IT IS clear that the decisive phase of the war is in the next few weeks,—whether Hitler succeeds or fails to deliver the knockout blow. If he succeeds, we shall be faced with the consequences of his victory before the summer is over; if he fails, and the war becomes again a war of siege and attrition, we shall be faced before the summer is over with questions which no one is as yet capable of foreseeing.

The schedule of our own politics is as follows: Mr. Roosevelt's second term will last until next January. The election is in November. The Democratic Convention is called for July. The Republican Convention is called for the end of June. Mr. Roosevelt will therefore be the President of the United States during the decisive phase of the war. But according to the present schedule the two parties are to write their platforms and to nominate their candidates just before or in the very midst of the decisive phase of the war.

The schedule of our defense program is such that during Mr. Roosevelt's present term of office only a beginning can be made towards creating the means for producing a larger navy, army and air force. To build a second navy is an undertaking which cannot be completed in many years; to equip a small but efficient army for the defense of this hemisphere down to the region of the Panama Canal will require much more than a year; to create the facilities for the large scale production of airplanes is a task which cannot be completed within much less than say two years.

IT WILL BE prudent then to fix in our minds that the war may be decided within three months, that the election will be decided within six months, that the Administration will be in office another seven months, that the defense program on which we are now embarking can be begun but cannot be completed within 18 months. Is it not clear then that if the government is to have the full confidence of the nation and the necessary authority, this result can be obtained immediately only by reorganizing the Administration under the leadership of Mr. Roosevelt? For Mr. Roosevelt will be the President during the decisive phase of the war.

Some who have seen this much of the problem clearly have jumped to the conclusion that not only must Mr. Roosevelt be nominated at once for a third term but that his election should be conceded by common consent. That is, I think, exceedingly bad advice. The next few months may provide as severe a test as any to which a President has ever been subjected. We must not proceed on the assumption that the fate of this country depends upon one indispensable man. On the contrary, we should make it a matter of primary concern to have available in both parties qualified successors to Mr. Roosevelt. It will be the part of wisdom to support the President wholeheartedly, but also to organize our politics so that there are men in both parties who can carry on the responsibilities of government.

THE FIRST practical conclusion to be drawn from this is, it seems to me, that the national conventions should be postponed until much later in the summer. On the Democratic side postponement would seem to be absolutely necessary. For if the party nominates Mr. Roosevelt for a third term in the midst of the world crisis, it will inject into our domestic politics an issue which will dangerously disrupt the unity of the nation. If, on the other hand, the Democrats do not renominate Mr. Roosevelt, or if he declines the nomination, he will be a lame-duck President from July to January, unable to lead the nation or to speak for it with authority. That will be dangerous, too. Therefore, the Democratic Convention should be postponed until September, and the reason for postponing it should be that this is the only way to uphold the authority of the President and yet to put the third-term issue in cold storage during the critical period of the war.

It is not so imperative but it is desirable that the Republicans should also postpone their convention, if not until September then at least until August. For if the Republicans have to nominate in June and write their platform, how can they seriously expect to know what is to be the situation of this country in November? Surely it would be wise for them to wait as long as they possibly can to see what these catastrophic events will bring forth, and to wait and see how their candidates develop under the impact of a rapidly and violently changing situation. They will be much more likely to offer the nation leadership to which it can turn if they do not commit themselves hastily to a half-baked platform and to untried and unseasoned candidates.

IT IS THEN, I think, the duty of the President to lay aside all partisan considerations and to reorganize his Administration for the express purpose not only of making it more representative and more efficient but also, of training men in both parties to succeed himself. He dare not think of himself as the indispensable man. He dare not think of the Democratic Party as the indispensable party. If he is fully aware of the gravity and the difficulty of the times, he will reorganize this Administration with a view to letting available men be trained and tested by responsibility.

No one can tell who is fit to be the next President by reading the more or less synthetic speeches of candidates. Any man fit to be the next President of the United States should at once be placed in a responsible post and there allowed, encouraged and compelled to show what kind of stuff he is made of. And if any man declines to accept responsibility now it will be very doubtful whether he is fit for responsibility later.

IN ORDER TO make it clear that the Administration is to be reorganized so that it may have the full confidence of the nation, and the necessary authority, two measures are, I think, desirable.

The first is that all members of the present cabinet and all the heads of the great administrative agencies should place their resignation in the hands of the President. This is no reflection on any of them. There is no other way, it seems to me, of demonstrating to the country their own selfless devotion to the national interest, and there is no other way in which places can be vacated for men who would make the Administration more representative and more efficient. There is no disgrace in resigning under such circumstances: many of the officials affected would obviously be reappointed and others could be given tasks that are no less honorable and are better suited to their temperaments and their experience.

It would be invidious and unnecessary to name names and presumptuous to suggest appointments. But it seems evident that if the President and the Secretary of State belong to one party, the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of War might appropriately be men of the other party.

THE SECOND measure, I believe, should be to establish a Council of National Defense, not too large in number, charged with the formulation of programs and of policy but not with administration. It should be a super-cabinet with the President himself its leading member. This council should consist of eminent men—all of whom command the confidence of large sections of the people, all of whom recognize the gravity of the situation and are prepared to forget the disputes of the past in order to deal with the emergency of the present.

It would be inadvisable to make a list of names. The names will quickly enough be evident to those who approve the idea. But to make the proposal somewhat more concrete, I should say that this council ought certainly to include ex-President Hoover. For one of the things this council will have to face is the likelihood by next winter of one of the greatest famines in history. The council should include also, it seems to me, Mr. Wendell Willkie as the most widely trusted industrialist in public life. Either the council or the revised cabinet should include Col. Frank Knox and Gov. Landon. And if labor were able to unite, the council should include a leader of organized labor.

THE ENDS to be gained by such a reorganization of the Administration are threefold: first, to insure the support of the nation; second, to make the government more efficient; third, to have in being for the critical days ahead a machinery of consultation and collaboration by which the leaders of the nation may be quickly and continuously informed. Only then will they be able to speak to the nation without confusion and misunderstanding and misinformation.

An infant menaced by man's brutal greed . . .
The picture shocks and saddens all the earth
And makes again the heart of mankind bleed.

A symbol of the weak against the strong—
The story of this war in one full flash:
A child whose very life breath needs defense
From mankind in a dark abysmal dash!

How like a casket seems this tiny case
Within which is a gentle, wide-eyed child!
Is it a symbol, too, of this world's young,
Destined to die to suit a world gone wild?

A nurse and parent bear this strangest crib
As picture-takers seal and stamp the scene . . .
Again an infant flees from edicts cruel
As fled so long ago the Nazarene.

The mother has a gas mark at her waist,
As has the troubled father and the maid
Is this the year of nineteen forty? . . . speak!
Is this the world two thousand years have made!

The first public sale of nylon hosiery the other day brought riot scenes in department stores. Ima Dodo, for instance, got all her clothes ripped trying to get one pair of ripless stockings.

Fair Query

The Nazis kill and slaughter,
They talk of frightful blows,
They threaten dreadful methods
As terror widely grows.

They glory in the ruthless,
All sacred places burn . . .
I wonder how they'll take it
When tides begin to turn?

Letters On The War

(The Post presents herewith a symposium of its letter writers' opinions on the European war as it affects the United States.

The correspondence printed here has necessarily been condensed. Other letters on the subject will be published when there is opportunity.)

Our Own Business

In a late issue of The Post, your columnist, Mr. Sullivan, had an article on "If Hitler Triumphs," which so far as the United States is concerned, is far from correct. In the first place it does not seem that Hitler is like Napoleon, and others, out trying to acquire empire, as it must be remembered that he really begged Britain to come in with Germany that they might make a lasting peace. It seems that Mr. Sullivan was trying to say that if he is successful against Britain and France, that he will then try his hand on the Americas or the Western Hemisphere. Knowing the scriptual history of America, we can hardly agree. God has prospered our beginnings hitherto and will continue to prosper us, until at last we shall establish righteousness on this earth. So let us quit warmonger business, and start anew to build America back again on its former basis, as it was left to us by our Revolutionary Fathers.—D. Paul Ziegler, editor, The Torch of Israel.

A Hitler Peace

If an apparently soon-to-be triumphant Hitler takes over the navies of Britain and France, as he can do if he threatens the destruction of London and Paris, we shall be outclassed on the seas, as well as in the air, and we shall have to accept without effective protest any disposition he may make of the colonial empires, including Canada and the British West Indies. We may even have to compromise on our control of the Panama Canal. This situation would permanently compel an armament program so costly as to lower our standards of living for generations. We should exert every ounce of our national capacity from now on toward moderating the terms of a Hitler triumph.—Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Washington.

For Prompt Aid

Unless by the promptest help of which we are capable the British and French forces can be maintained as effective fighting units between us and Germany we may not have time to fully arm for modern war before Hitler and his allies make impudent demands for the exploitation of South America, Canada, Mexico or even the United States, that no self respecting nation can permit. We need the Allies and the Allies need us as never before to combat the most dangerous, ruthless forces of aggression that ever threatened the world.—Henry E. Colton, Nashville, Tenn.

Prepare, Don't Declare

Without question the overwhelming sentiment of the American people is with the Allies. But how much good would it do the Allies for the United States to declare war against Germany? Of what military help would we be to them? The Allies are now buying American planes and other material to the limit of our present capacity to produce. They have all the money they will need for months to come. We are today almost a cipher militarily. Let us instantly set about the task of adequate preparedness.—Merwin K. Hart, president, New York State Economic Council, Inc.

What We Owe

The real truth is that Great Britain owes us nothing and that we owe them a great deal. They have been guarding, and fighting for, our security for the past 100 years. Just imagine the fix we would be in if the Allies are defeated in this war and the British navy is swept from the Atlantic! The Germans will then have a clear sailing over here.—John Mainly, Martinsburg, W. Va.

National Defense

To save the Union: Tell Roosevelt to resign now and let Garner finish the term. Resignations in high places are in order here as well as in England and France. Place experienced business men in the Cabinet. Before appropriating additional enormous sums for defense, make the money already appropriated for less important purposes available for national defense, for example: Change CCC camps to military camps. Abandon or curtail WPA projects. Transfer about 80 per cent of the employes now in Federal bureaus to the work of national defense under the supervision of experienced businessmen.—James Emery Brooks, Glen Ridge, N. J.

Lindbergh Errs

By Mark Sullivan

The Oceans Do Not Protect Us

COL. LINDBERGH'S speech does not deserve all the recrimination that is being heaped upon it. Some that he said was sound. But Col. Lindbergh did put himself on the side of those who oppose our present drive for preparedness—"let us stop this hysterical chatter . . ." And the essential basis of Col. Lindbergh's argument was one we have believed too long, and which, if we continue to believe it will be fatal to us.

This basis of Col. Lindbergh's argument was in terms long familiar: "From the standpoint of defense, we still have two great oceans between us and the warring armies of Europe and Asia." It may be Col. Lindbergh had in mind the oceans as a defense against air attack only; but the whole spirit of his speech implies that the oceans continue to keep us safe in all respects. That simply is not true. To believe it would be the most tragic error this Nation could commit at this time.

Face the situation as it exists. Reduce it to stark simplicity. Germany and the Allies are at war. One or the other will win—within a day, a week, a month, sometime. That much is axiomatic, even in a time when many axioms are questioned.

If the Allies win, nothing will have happened as respects us and our need for defense. If the Allies win, we will be back where we were a month ago, or two years ago, or ten; we will have our old sense of safety. Quite probably, if the Allies win, we would relax our drive for preparedness. In any event we do not need, at this time, to examine whatever chain of consequences would follow Allied victory.

But Germany may win. That, at the hour this is written, is a 50 per cent possibility, at least. The consequences that would follow German victory, we must study.

IF GERMANY WINS, what becomes of the British navy? Some say it would flee—to Canada, to Singapore. If it did flee, it would be brought back, for surrender to Germany. Hitler would say to Britain: "Bring back that navy and deliver it, or I will raze England as I have razed Poland." Some say the British would scuttle their navy. But that, too, Hitler would probably prevent, by intimidation. If Hitler continues to make progress against Britain, if he feels sure he is going to win, he will, before the actual moment of conquest, issue warning to Britain. He will warn Britain that if she sinks her navy he will punish her in the ways he knows and has practiced—execution of some of her citizens, reduction of others to enforced labor in Germany, destruction of her cities, erasure of her historic buildings and institutions. If Hitler makes that threat, with apparent power to enforce it, Britain will not be justified in failing to heed. Britain will preserve her navy, for surrender—for tribute, as the price to pay for a conqueror's forbearance. Why should Britain, if she knew she were about to be conquered, save the navy, at such cost to herself, in the interest of the United States? It is for the interest of the United States it would be.

With the British navy in German hands, would you then, Col. Lindbergh, say that the Atlantic Ocean would save us?

As quickly as Germany with her newly acquired navy, could cross the sea, she would seize, as a recognized right of conquest, every British island on this side the Atlantic. She would seize Newfoundland, and every British island in the West Indies, and every French one and Dutch one. How near some of these then German possessions are, in miles and time, to Florida to Charleston, to New York, to the Panama Canal—that startling table of distances President Roosevelt recited to Congress last Thursday.

With these possessions in Germany's hands and also the British navy in her hands, would you then say, Col. Lindbergh, that the Atlantic Ocean protects us?

THE ONLY QUESTION is, how soon would Germany leap the brief distance between us and her then possessions? Some say not for a long time—we would have a chance to arm ourselves. But how can anybody, looking upon the German technique of war, and upon the personality of Hitler, say that Germany would give us time to arm against her?

Some say that Germany would wait, because the German fighting forces would be tired. But to a conquering army tired, the best refreshment is more conquest. Every conquering leader in history, from Alexander to Napoleon, has known that. Some say that Germany as a nation, would be exhausted, her wealth all spent. In that event, where is more wealth to be found, where is booty and tribute?

But suppose the extremely unlikely, suppose Germany gave us time to arm. Time might enable us to arm for defense of our own soil alone. But hardly all the time conceivable would be enough to arm for safe defense of all Latin America, the whole Western Hemisphere, against a Germany entrenched in the West Indies. Even given a long time, we could hardly defend the whole Western Hemisphere against German arms. We could certainly not defend it against the process by which Germany in some cases attains her ends—first, infiltration by fifth columns, penetration by economic means and in other ways; and then, by arms.

We have been considering Germany alone. What of Japan? The best judges this column knows say that the moment Germany has conquered the Allies, the moment she has possession of the British fleet and the British West Indies—the moment, that is, when our navy has more to do in the Atlantic Ocean than it can do—at that moment Japan would take, in the Pacific Ocean, steps against which we would feel it necessary to defend ourselves.

In that event, would you say, Col. Lindbergh, that the "two great oceans" would defend us against a European and an Asiatic nation attacking us at the same time?

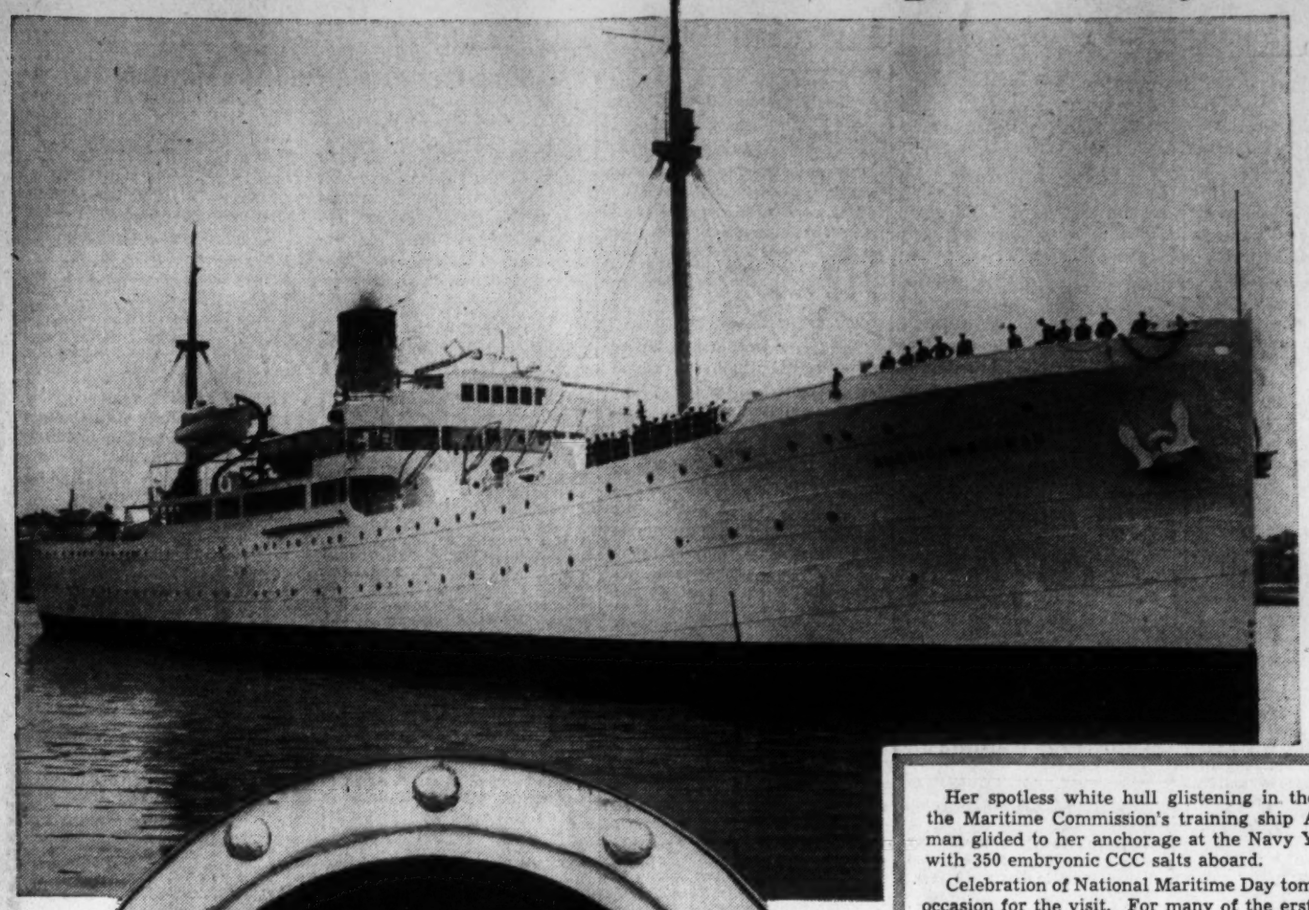
'American Seaman' Ties-Up at Navy Yard



Her spotless white hull glistening in the midday sun, the Maritime Commission's training ship American Seaman glided to her anchorage at the Navy Yard yesterday with 350 embryonic CCC salts aboard.

Celebration of National Maritime Day tomorrow was the occasion for the visit. For many of the erstwhile Civilian Conservation Corps enrollees, it was their first sight of the National Capital. For many of the 150 young crew members who were stationed at the Camp Dix (N. J.) CCC camp until the American Seaman picked them up 10 days ago, it was the conclusion of their first ocean voyage.

Along with the Massachusetts State training ship Nantucket, the American Seaman will be open to inspection by invited guests at 1 p. m. tomorrow. While the visitors are going through her immaculate galley and comfortable sleeping quarters, the crew members will be out picnicking, according to plans which were being prepared last night.

Lieut. Comdr. Charles Etzweiler, U. S. C. G., is in command of the ship, whose home port is St. Petersburg, Fla. Under him are four commissioned Coast Guard officers, seven maritime service officers, several Coast Guard warrant officers, a Public Health Service physician and a Public Health Service dentist.

For many of the crew it was their first visit to Washington. Steward Fox got his first look at the Capital from a porthole

Jane Withers, At 14, Graduates Into 'A' Pictures

Hollywood, May 20 (AP).—Jane Withers, No. 1 juvenile at her studio now that 11-year-old Shirley Temple has retired from the movies, is embarking upon what is virtually a new career.

At 14, after six years in small-budget films, she graduates into "A" pictures.

No longer the plump little hoyden who lent needed spice to Shirley's sweetness in "Bright Eyes," Jane has become a slender, well-mannered, almost demure girl—and her roles are being matched accordingly.

She's weathered some pretty poor pictures, has Jane, to climb steadily in box-office popularity. Last year she was thirteenth among the stars, outranked in the juvenile field only by first-place Mickey Rooney, fifth-place Shirley Temple, and tenth-place Deanna Durbin.

Jane has made 24 movies, exactly the number that Shirley made before she dropped out of pictures last week. But where Shirley had to carry her expensive pictures almost alone, Jane had only slight responsibility.

Sale of Nylon Stockings Causes Feminine Panic

New York, May 20.

LAST WEDNESDAY saw rough and tumble football scrimmages in many of our stores, as the girls galloped in to snatch up some of the new Nylon stockings which went on sale that day. It was a terrific headache for merchants, since their small stocks were wiped off the shelves by noon, and the ladies went out baffled and pouting.

ALICE HUGHES

Not in years has a product been so widely ballyhooed so long before release as these leg-coverings woven of the synthetic yarn. As a result, the women of the Republic have been all agog to try a few pairs. Recently the manufacturers have been busy stamping out and heading off a lot of dangerous overplugging—such as the erroneous notions that this hosiery can't possibly snag or run, and will probably wear forever. Patent nonsense, of course, for any finely woven delicate bit of wearing apparel will snag, but everybody can hope until the reverse is proven.

Public interest in these stockings drove our merchants to agree not to take advance orders, nor to sell more than two pairs to a customer. The hitch lies in the slowness with which the yarn is produced, though the plants work at top speed. One of our shops, for instance, could get only 12 dozen pairs on its initial order, and when they will get replacements, gosh only knows, and won't tell. You can get an idea of the crisis by knowing that the 46 manufacturers weaving the new sockies, using all the yarn they could get, made no more than 100,000 dozen pairs in four months—and the average daily sale of silk stockings is 137,000 dozen pairs. So if you're late, don't shoot the makers—they're doing their best.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: The "Romeo and Juliet" of Laurence Olivier and his dream-made, Vivien "O'Hara" Leigh, got a fine pasting from the local critics. Neither star was given a very good rating, though I like it, especially the agile Larry, who looks well in his tights and so on. Leigh looks a Juliet, but doesn't read her with any gumption. It is generally felt that Olivier made a fatal mistake in directing the drama as well as acting. He should have called in some crackerjack director to tell him how to do it, probably the brilliant Margaret Webster, who has directed Maurice Evans so brilliantly in Shakespeare. But hey-nonny-nonny, the milk has been spilt. Better luck next time, you love-birds!

BEST SELLER NOTE: The American Bible Society reports that 7,370,908 copies of the Good Book were sold in 1939. Hmmm—wonder if Maggie Mitchell is a trifle miffed. Her "Gone With the Wind" didn't quite hit that . . .

Have you seen the new little helper to the raincoat? Certainly will help the legs in the coming summer showers. They are half-pants, stretching from ankle to knee, operating with a zipper, and designed to be worn under the raincoat in an open roadster or on a hike in a driving rain. Very swell idea.

Ship Ahoy!

This modest seashore costume would be appropriate whether summer enterprises include yachting or just sailing in a cat boat. The price of both the neat tailored blouse and skirt—under $5—would make any one want to put out to sea. "Sailing blue" is the color of this washable, sunfast cotton outfit and the style of the free-swinging skirt and club-collared shirt are designed to make you look as young as you feel

The Gentler Sex

A Break for F. D. R.

THE WAY is now clear for President Roosevelt to declare his intention concerning a third term.

Mrs. DeGoofey

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, noted crusader and president of the Do Something About It League, announced yesterday at her press conference that she was withdrawing from the national Presidential contest to give the President a clear field.

"I feel," she said "that President Roosevelt has been holding back from a third term statement because I was in the race."

"You mean the President is too chivalrous to run against you?" asked a representative of the F. F. V. Quarterly.

"Oh no, no! But I think I was the only candidate he feared he could not defeat. Now from the time I announced my candidacy about a year ago, he has been increasingly cagey about his third term intentions.

"Why are you withdrawing, Mrs. DeGoofey?," asked a city room "undercover" man.

To Concentrate On Mrs. Wadd

"Well, in the first place, I am so occupied with my fight to retain the Presidency of the Do Something About It League that I don't have any time for politics. As you may know, the vested interests are running Mrs. Marmaduke Wadd, widow of the nut cup magnate, against me and I am determined to defeat her at all costs. It is far more important to the country that I be president of the Do Something About It League than of the United States.

"Second, it is becoming too common a pursuit to run for President. Every comic on the stage and radio—and also off, I may add—seems to be a Presidential candidate. You can't turn your radio on any more without hearing either a statesman or a gag man declaiming about saving the Nation.

"Third, I realized I was facing a very ungenteel mud-slinging campaign, as both Republican money and Tammany were arrayed against me.

"Fourth, I felt I could do more good outside the White House than in. As head of large heckler organization, such as the Do Something About It League, I can get really important things done such as improving the lamb chops at club luncheons, eliminating the overnight guest, putting more divisions in summer handbags, providing tenderer ham at buffet suppers—than I could in the White House where I would have to fool around with budgets and national debts, and where everything I would attempt would be foiled by the stupidity of Congress.

Too Far Ahead Off Her Times

"And finally I decided that this country was not yet ready for a woman President."

"What make you say that?" interrupted a reporter for the Women Are As Good as Men Magazine.

"Simply because the people have not yet advanced to a stage of intelligence where they could appreciate a woman—especially one like me who is ahead of her time."

"Do you have any regrets at giving up the White House round of gayety?" asked a society columnist.

"No indeed. If I were in the White House, I would have 130,000,000 people telling me what I ought to wear, eat, do and say. And, as I have pointed out before, I am now probably the only free woman in the United States, being widow with an annuity and no close relatives, and not trying to get either a husband or an office or to better my social position."

"Any news on your election fight in the Do Something About It League?" asked a police reporter.

"Yes, I am gaining strength daily, even though Mrs. Wadd is resorting to all forms of cheap bribery. She even gave away tin curlers and pocket perfume atomizers at her recent tea in Griffith Stadium. But I am depending on the inherent decency of the league voters to return me to office."

"Wholly on that!" exclaimed a political correspondent.

"Yes, and on about 1,000,000 beautifully packaged jars of magic, youthifying, rejuvenating night cream that I am distributing daily at my headquarters."

New Breakfast Eggs

To arouse breakfast interest in your family try some new stunts with old standbys. Here is one: Sprinkle any kind of crunchy, ready-cooked cereal in buttered custard cups (or baking dishes). Drop an egg into each and top with a little butter, salt and paprika (no paprika for the youngsters, though). Bake in a moderate oven while you're preparing the rest of the breakfast—it will take about seven minutes to cook the eggs unless you prefer them very soft.

Less-Time-in-the-Kitchen

IF GARDENING, golf and other out-of-door activities are to be carried on by housewives, they will have to inaugurate the slogan, "less time in the kitchen." But it isn't necessary to have less attractive or nutritious dishes just because one prepares food in advance.

A Molded Tongue and Salad Ring is a meal-in-one dish that can be made in the morning, tucked away in the refrigerator and served for dinner with a hot bread, a dessert and beverage and yet be an attractive and adequate dish. Here are the directions for making this dish.

Molded Tongue and Salad Ring

Simmer 1 large beef tongue until very tender and cool in the broth. Remove skin and slice. Drain 1 No. 2 can cut green beans. Measure liquid and add enough water to make 2 cups. Heat and add 1 package lemon gelatin, stirring to dissolve. Add 2 tablespoons vinegar and a little salt. Pour a thin layer into a ring mold and chill the rest until sirupy. Arrange thin slices of tongue slightly overlapping, crosswise of the mold and chill. Combine beans and 3 tablespoons each of chopped green pepper and minced pimiento with the rest of the gelatin when partly set and spoon carefully over the tongue. Cover with slices of tongue and chill thoroughly. Turn out and fill the center with endive. Garnish with slices of hard cooked egg.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man 'Cares a Great Deal' for a Certain Girl; Might Even Marry Her; Should He Tell Her So?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A few years ago I came to Washington from the Middle West. Over a year ago I met an attractive girl who is just a few months younger. She graduated from college last spring and soon will complete a special post graduate course of study. About the same time, I will complete my special training.

Since we met, we have had many dates; have shared a variety of activities, always have a good time together and never have quarreled or disputed. We seem to care a great deal for each other. There seems to be a mutual understanding. She does not object to such "attentions" as kissing, holding hands, etc., and seems to enjoy linking her arm in mine when we are walking, driving, etc.

A while back, she asked me what I thought of her. I parried the question by asking her what she thought of me. She replied that she thought the feeling was mutual. Which brings me to my problem: I like her very much. She seems interested in me; at least, she always acts as if she cares for me very much. But I have never told her how much I care, because I didn't want her to know.

Her family has always treated me cordially and my family likes her very much. Neither family would object if we decided to marry. I believe I might consider marriage to her if we both get jobs in the same city after June? Should I tell her exactly how I feel toward her? Or should I remain noncommittal and wait for her to express herself? Very truly yours. C. B. K.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A Non-Committal Suitor Is Spiritually Stingy

DEAR C. B. K.: I have just been reading a volume of essays, the author of which observes, "to be thrifty in love is to be vile." He treats of love in its spiritual essence—making a clear distinction between this beneficent expression of other-awareness and those selfish romantic attitudes, sentimental emotions and sensual desires which all too often are labeled "love."

Your cautious self containment, in your supposedly affectional dealings with this girl, is symptomatic of spiritual penuriousness, if not of spiritual poverty, it seems to me. If you love her; or, as you say, "care a great deal" for her, the generous, fearless, truthful thing to do is to say so. Make her a free gift of the avowal, and indeed, of a whole pattern of personal behavior toward her which eloquently indicates the very special esteem in which you hold her.

What have you to gain in hoarding your innermost feelings and half-formed intentions? You have nothing to gain, in my opinion. On the contrary, I think you stand to lose much—not only in terms of personality expansion, but also in terms of the reciprocal relationship. By your stingy attitude you are limiting (even dwarfing) your growth, as well as constricting the relationship to a degree that may cause it eventually to wither altogether.

It is a spiritual truism, psychically supported, that we receive in such measure as we give. If we give litle or nothing, we may expect that much in return, and this is no where so clearly manifest as in the realm of the affections. Give freely of your noblest qualities to the deserving (letting intelligence or intuition guide you), and you will find those qualities reflected back to you from the personality of the recipient. But withhold and evade, craftily parrying with the beloved lest you lose some theoretical "advantage" by being generous, and you will find, in time, that you have brought to ruin the very thing you hoped thereby to build.

It is a noteworthy phenomenon that a man and woman of superior caliber, who love each other greatly and generously, actually grow in companionship to be very like each other, not only in temperament but sometimes even in unfathomable aspects of personal appearance. Haven't you seen, or heard of, such couples?—of whom it is said, "more like brother and sister than man and wife." By the same token, persons who are intimately associated on a meanminded basis come finally to reflect that vicious interchange in their distraught countenances and warped, impoverished personalities.

So my advice to you, in this instance, is to tell the girl "exactly how you feel toward her," and with her cooperation work out your future plans from there. I do not mean that a downright proposal of marriage must of necessity accompany the candid declaration. Good marriages are not made on the basis of love alone. But marriage is a partnership, and if the prospect of such a partnership is being even remotely considered, it should be discussed in a spirit of honesty and good faith by the two persons concerned. Each must give the other the benefit of truth, if a sound decision is to be made—a decision the wisdom of which time will indorse. M. H.

White Still Leads For Commencement

New York (AP).—Most commencement frocks are still white. (Only about 30 per cent are expected to be pastel.)

Frocks for eighth grade graduates are designed with careful thought to their clothes problems, too. Newest are long enough to touch shoe tops, sheer and pretty enough to dance at the country club. The best are cut very simply. There are just as many short ones, however, to meet the approval of schools that consider long frocks too grown up. These are often of crepe or rayon suiting, designed with shirtwaist tops and are often accompanied by little boleros.

Flowers will do some smart tricks—great sheafs of purple iris or bright tulips or garlands of green leaves will be carried instead of bouquets.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Herb Beautifiers

Women in their search for the ultimate in cosmetics are turning back to age-old remedies. The herb—an important ingredient in skin preparations of ancient beauties such as Helen of Troy and Cleopatra—has been restored to favor. Herbs are now used for perfumes, creams, sachets, skin lotions and astringents.

EIDER flowers, indigenous to sections of Europe for many centuries, were long used to heal sunburn and to remove freckles. Now these come in the form of an astringent and a bleach to whiten the skin.

MARIGOLD, another beautifying herb, was grown originally in Asia and southern Europe, and was reputed to be a healing herb of amazing powers. During the Middle Ages a syrup of marigold petals was used for many diseases. The soothing properties of the marigold are now being infused in lotions, creams and mild astringents.

ROSES, most romantic of all flowers, came originally from Persia. Water distilled from roses was part of a thriving trade in the eighth century. In the days of the Roman Emperors, floors were strewn with rose leaves, food was flavored with them, and they floated in wines served at feasts. Rose petals today are used in perfumes and to make the potpourri bowls

Helen Parrish, New Movie Beauty, Learned Posture From Brothers

By Ida Jean Kain

EVER SINCE Helen Parrish, the 17-year-old who is being groomed for glamorous stardom in the films, has been going around with a Certain Young Man, she has taken to bowling every day, riding horseback every other day, playing golf at least once a week and sometimes oftener, and practicing archery as often as she can get to a shooting range!

No wonder she is rapdily becoming one of Hollywood's most streamlined actresses!

Naturally, she didn't become so enthused over athletics simply in order to become ultra-streamlined. As she explains: "You just learn to like what He likes!"

"Body Mechanics"

But, whatever the reason, everything is working out according to specification. It is essential that a star have a beautiful figure . . . and out of a family of film actors, Helen is the one who is really serious about her screen career!

Long before the days of the best beau, however, this youngster was taking a daily lesson in posture from—of all people—her two brothers! Growing boys have never been known to bother their heads about "body mechanics" and stuff, but they can tell at a glance whether or not a girl is standing up straight. And if not, and if the girl happens to be their sister, WHAM! "Right between the shoulders," says Helen reflectively. "They used to hit me every time I slouched. There was nothing to be done about it except to quit slouching!"

Once she became posture conscious, Helen found that practice before a mirror will enable any girl to acquire a lovely carriage. The way you look tallest and slimmest is the correct stance.

As she says, "It is a sort of retreat from the rear! If you pull the hips foward, you pull the tummy up and into line, and your figure looks much, much better!"

Engage in Athletics

Now, being reminded of the fact that you are slumping will not always serve to correct the trouble. You may not have the vitality to maintain a superb carriage . . . You have to feel fine in order to want to hold yourself erect, and to engage in the athletics that make for a beautiful figure! It may be that you need more of the right foods, such as milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables, which build vitality. You may not be getting enough sleep and outdoor exercise.

Indefatigable First Lady Tires Out All Around Her

Mrs. Roosevelt Crowds More Into a Day Than Any One, and Accelerates Tempo With Extra Busy Calendar Just Ahead

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IN MY LIFETIME I've seen my share of busy women. But never one who can crowd as much into one week, one day, and one hour as Mrs. Roosevelt. First time I ever attended her press conference, I heard a weary newspaperwoman moan, "It wears me out just to write down all the things she's going to do from one week to the next. How she ever manages them all is a mystery to me."

Hope Ridings Miller

Well, all I can say now is that the indefatigable First Lady seems to be moving with more speed than ever these days, and that her calendar is more crowded than ever.

Biggest item on her schedule yesterday was the picnic luncheon at which she and hostesses of the Cabinet circle entertained in honor of the Senate Ladies' Luncheon Club. An annual event, the party took place on the White House lawn. Today, at 10 a. m., the First Lady will meet with the WPA National Advisory Committee at the White House, and this afternoon she will attend the Community Chest garden party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover. This evening, President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at the annual White House press party and at a small dinner beforehand.

Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the U. S. Ambassador at Rome, will be an overnight guest at the White House; as will Mr. and Mrs. George Bye and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Deans, of New York. Accompanied by the latter two couples, Mrs. Roosevelt will be off to West Virginia tomorrow. The following day she is scheduled for visits in Arthurdale, Scott's Run and Morgantown. She has a lecture appointment in Wheeling on Friday and will return to Washington late that night.

On Saturday afternoon, the First Lady will drive out to Oakland, Mrs. William Cocoran Eustis' Virginia home, to meet a group of public school teachers from the surrounding country. Mrs. Roosevelt plans to return to the White House for dinner on Saturday. A group of Y. M. C. A. executives will be received at the White House on Sunday at 2 p. m.

MRS. ROOSEVELT will spend next Monday in Philadelphia and that evening she will speak in Camden, N. J. She is scheduled to visit a job-getting project in New York City on Tuesday, and she will give a lecture in Trenton, N. J., that evening. She will be in Olean, N. Y., on Wednesday and in Westchester for a Decoration Day service Thursday. Other appointments that week-end call for her attendance at a charity exhibition of dresses in New York on Friday, May 31. One of her blue lace frocks, worn last year while Great Britain's King and Queen were here, will be on display. A lecture at Asbury Park, N. J., is on Mrs. Roosevelt's calendar for Friday night, May 31. The following day, she will return to New York to open the Fashion Building at the World's Fair, and to visit some WPA exhibits. She will lecture at a Red Cross meeting in Brooklyn that evening, and will return to the Fair on Sunday to speak before a meeting of the International Garment Workers. She will return to Washington that evening and have her next press conference on Monday, June 3.

PICKED UP IN PASSING: John Bowler Hull, youngest son of Lady Lewis, is receiving congratulations on his appointment to West Point. His two elder brothers, Capt. Charles King and Ludlow King, were educated there; as were several other members of the family . . . Marjorie Meuser, deb of the season, is a licensed pilot in three countries—England, France and the United States. Quite a record for a girl not yet 21 . . . Mrs. Edward Pfeiffer, of New York, the former Betty Vandenberg, is the guest of Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg for a few days.

Chinese Ambassador Getting Honorary Degrees From Eight U. S. Universities

THE CHINESE AMBASSADOR is receiving honorary degrees from eight different American universities. He is one of the most distinguished philosophers and scholars of China . . . Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, our Minister to Norway, and Edward Bruce, chief of the Government's Fine Art Section, have both been profiled for two national magazines by Maxine Davis. Mrs. Harriman has finally ended up in Stockholm, according to word received by her daughter, Mrs. Harriman Russell.

SIPOSS (pronounced She-posh) is taking out his citizenship papers. Washington's most famous authority on exercise and massage, who ministers to Washington notables from Cabinet members on down, is the fifth generation of his family to do this kind of work. His mother acted in the same capacity for the Emperor Franz Josef of Austria-Hungary. Siposs regards his classes of devoted exercise-takers and excess weight removers as a sideline; his most important work is the medical cases on which doctors call him in for help.

ACCORDING TO WORD received at the Norwegian Legation here, the blitzkrieg in Scandinavia dealt a death blow to the silver-platina fox fur industry. Hostilities began at the height of the whelping season, and it was the foxes themselves, rather than bullets or shrapnel, who created havoc in new fur stocks. Excited by all the noise, many of them killed their pups as fast as the tiny whelps were born.

Incidentally, a single platina fur in New York last fall brought $11,000 in the open market, wholesale. This rare fox was bred from a hybrid born to a coast fisherman who kept the animals as a hobby. He was sold to a canny dealer in 1933 and six years later had 4,000 direct descendants.

MRS. JAMES ROOSEVELT, the President's mother, is among the knitters for the Bundles for Britain group in New York a branch of which has just been opened here. Lynn Fontanne, who is upholding the anti-isolationist cause in "There Shall Be no Night" is also among the distinguished knitters. Alfred Lunt holds her wool for her when she works at headquarters.

Here in Washington, new organizations are hardly ever launched without benefit of tea or cocktails. When Mrs. Wales Latham, head of the New York "Bundles," wrote friends that Capital headquarters would open yesterday, she found on arrival that most of them thought that meant a party. But evidently in New York "opened for work" means just that, without benefit of a single Martini.

AT LEAST A DOZEN dinners are being planned before the gay Leap Year dance which Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss will give on Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. Randall Hagner will be among the hosts.

If the weather is fair, the party should be one of the most beautiful of the season, as the gardens and swimming pool of Merrywood are high on a hill overlooking the Potomac and offer a most romantic setting.

THE WEDNESDAY Supper Dance tomorrow at the 1925 F Street Club also is being preceded by a great many cocktail gatherings. Mrs. Francis Whitten, the Kenneth Watsons and Mrs. Mondell Gregg will all entertain. The committee, headed by Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, is hoping for a pleasant night so supper can be served in the garden.

Mrs. Albert Carter Closes Apartment, Returns to Coast

Mrs. Albert E. Carter, wife of Representative Carter, of California, has closed her apartment at the Mayflower Hotel and returned to California. She will attend the graduation of her nieces, the Misses Miriam and Marjory Smith.

The Misses Smith will be graduated from the University of California May 25. Twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Don Smith, of Woodlake, Calif., they spent last year in Washington as guests of their aunt and uncle, and while here attended George Washington University, where they were extremely popular among the younger group.

Mrs. Martha Griggs Back From Coast

Mrs. Martha C. Griggs recently returned from a trip to Coronado, Calif., where she was the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Commander and Mrs. Miles R. Browning.

At present Mrs. Griggs has as her guest a nephew, James M. Wooddall, who is the Mayor of Augusta, Ga.

Mrs. Woodhouse Tells Of Studies in Trends

D. C. Committee Hears of Work Done By Institute of Women's Professional Relations; Mrs. Richberg Hostess

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Work of the Institute of Women's Professional Relations in studying trends so as to offer guidance toward definite objectives in women's education was explained yesterday by Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse at a meeting of the Washington Committee. Mrs. Donald Richberg was hostess to the group of which Mrs. David Cushman Coyle is local chairman and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, of this city, national chairman.

Mrs. Woodhouse, who is director of the institute, located at Connecticut College for Women, illustrated how the study of general trends enabled the institute to predict such opportunities as are now offered for home economics-trained women as a result of the consumer movement. The institute saw the movement developing and issued a bulletin outlining possibilities in this field.

"Our effort is to see a school generation ahead, so as to avoid bottlenecks," she said.

Mrs. Coyle, in introducing her, pointed out the need for such an outpost from which to view the swiftly changing scene in the economic world. The recent announcement of the revolutionary discovery of "R-235," or atomic energy, reveals a future toward less and less work with the hands, and more in the field of planning.

The institute desires to publish its bulletin, now issued quarterly, every month, and to disseminate its information more widely, giving greater service to both men and women through its surveys.

Here the membership of the committee is to be increased and a carnival will be given June 14 at the Shouse farm as a benefit for the institute's work.

Funds Raised At Auction Of Rare Books

Funds were raised for the American Merchant Marine Library Association late yesterday afternoon at an auction of rare books held at Dumbarton Oaks through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

Despite the downpour at the hour of the affair more than 125 attended. Sir Wilmott Lewis conducted the auction in a gay spirit, assisted by Vernon Clapp and David Mears, of the Library of Congress. Twenty-four books were sold, a first edition of Keats, in two beautifully bound volumes bringing the top price. It was a gift from the Dumbarton Oaks collection and was bought by Mrs. Keith Merrill.

Next on the list was a first edition of "Little Men," by Louisa M. Alcott, and the third highest bid was for a volume by the late Associate Justice Cardozo, inscribed by Associate Justice Harlan Fiske Stone.

President Roosevelt's book, "Looking Forward," with an inscription, designating it to the archives of the association, was presented by Breckenridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State, to Mrs. Henry Howard, of Newport, national president of the association.

Mrs. Emory Scott Land, chairman of the Washington Committee, was among those who attended the affair.

Tea was served in the conservatory by a group of debutantes and the auction held in the music room. Those on the debutante committee were the Misses Mary Wilson, chairman, Sylvia Szechenyi, Nancy Glover, Betty McBride, Nancy Weller, Helen Lippit, Mary Wright, Emily Davis, Louise Burke, Barbara and Sally Bradley.

Miss Hutchinson Gives Luncheon For Miss Burchell

Mr. McFarland is the son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Earl McFarland.

Guests at the luncheon also included Miss Charlotte Burchell, Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Katherine Pearson, Miss Gladys Carter, Miss Margaret Swartzell, Miss Ann Barr, Miss Eleanor Hawley, Miss Ann Hawley, Miss Louise Gardiner, Miss Nancy Davis, Miss Peggy Wilmer, Miss Louise Luebben and Miss Yolanda Alfaro.

A.A.U.W. Elects Mrs. Van Vleck

Other new officers include Miss Ruby Nevins, second vice president; Miss Virginia Kinnard, recording secretary; Mrs. G. R. Wilhelm, treasurer, and Mrs. Frank S. Smith, director.

The balloting was from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. Saturday, and from noon to 5:30 yesterday. At 9:30, the tellers had completed their count and announced the result. Mrs. Clyde Hadley was chairman of the committee.

D. A. R. Members to Crochet Banquet Cloth To Add to Gifts Adorning New Chapter House

MANY GIFTS have been made to the new D. A. R. Chapter House since it was opened a few months ago at 1734 Massachusetts avenue, but none is more unusual than that planned by members of a group meeting for luncheon tomorrow with the retiring regent, Miss Lillian Chenoweth.

During the summer, they expect to crochet a banquet cloth for the handsome dining table. Miss Chenoweth, an expert with the crochet hook, has invited several other D. A. R's, equally skillful, to discuss the plan tomorrow. They will decide on the design, take responsibility for a certain number of medallions each and "farm out" the rest to qualified crocheters in the District D. A. R.

Their work is sufficiently uniform to make it possible to do a cloth expected to be a rare and beautiful one.

Those planning it are, in addition to Miss Chenoweth, Mrs. David D. Caldwell, Mrs. John F. Little, Mrs. Clyde Hamblin, Mrs. Charles Montgomery and daughter Helen; Mrs. Clifton P. Clark, Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt, Mrs. Joseph Barrett Smith, general superintendent. All are of Alexandria and are the sons and daughter of Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett, a founder of the mission.

PRIZE WINNERS—Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt, publicity chairman for the P. E. O. Sisterhood and the Twentieth Century Club and former president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, was awarded first prize for the District in the Herald-Tribune publicity contest, held in cooperation with the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The second prize went to Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, second vice president of the federation who has been publicity chairman for the housekeepers alliance and the Woman's clinic.

MISSION ELECTS.—Among the officers elected for the coming year by the National Florence Crittenton Mission are Dr. Robert Barrett, president; John B. Barrett, secretary, and Mrs. Reba

GIVE SCHOLARSHIP.—In recognition of her patriotic service, Mrs. Mamie R. Schmidt, of the Conard Apartments, national director of the Daughters of '98, affiliated with the Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans, has been selected by the National Patriotic Council as one of approximately 50 patriotic leaders in various parts of the country in whose honor the council is bestowing a partial scholarship of $100 value. Newswomen Fete Procopes

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope were honor guests yesterday afternoon at a tea given by the Newspaper Women's Club at the Raleigh Hotel.

Both arrived from New York and came directly from the train—but one hour apart. They had been there over the week-end and were to have met at the train on their return, but, due to a porter's confusion as to daylight saving and standard time, they missed connections. The Minister, thinking Mme. Procope had boarded the train, got on and arrived an hour ahead of her.

Her welcome was all the warmer when she did reach the tea. Miss Katharine Brooks, the club president, received with her and the Minister and later the Minister talked briefly of his country.

At the tea table were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Robert Brennan, wife of the Minister of Ireland; Mrs. Samuel A. Kimberly and Miss Margaret Germond.

The breakfast was served in the dining room, where spring flowers decorated the tables. On the head table there was a large basket of pansies and lilies of the valley from Mrs. Baker's garden as a centerpiece, and at each place there were little May baskets filled with pansies and marked by hand-painted crads, the work of Mrs. Weston Valentine. There were also hand-decorated menus, made by Mrs. W. D. Wells, mother of Mrs. Morey.

The program was in the drawing room of the club, and included as the music for the afternoon contralto solos by Mrs. Helen Turley, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas Tremearne and selections by the club choral group.

The chorus sang as its closing number the "Marching Song," selected by the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs as its entry in the general federation's golden jubilee club song contest, results of which will be announced at Milwaukee this week. The words were by Mrs. Charles Osgood, one of the club's poets, and the musisc was by Mrs. Milburn, who directs the chorous. Incidental solos in the choral numbers were taken by Mrs. Leo Tooley and Mrs. Robert Lees.

The program also included an entertaining review of the season's meetings by Mrs. Bernard Bent, the retiring historian, and a talk on "Women's Clubs From an Editor's Point of View," by The Post club editor.

U. S. Loan Rate On Wheat Up Cent Over 1939

By the Associated Press

Acting for the second time in three days to bolster wheat prices which last week made the most sensational plunge in modern history, Secretary Wallace announced yesterday that the Government loan rate on the 1940 wheat crop would average 1 cent a bushel above last year's.

The Agriculture Department chief said the rate on this year's crop would average about 64 cents a bushel, compared with 63 cents last year.

Together with parity payments of 19 cents a bushel, Wallace said, the loan value would assure a return at the farm of at least 83 cents a bushel for wheat producers who complied with the agricultural adjustment program. (Parity payments are sums intended to give farm products as much purchasing power as they had in the 1909-14 period.)

On Saturday, after a week in which wheat prices dropped as much as 34 cents, Wallace asked grain futures markets to peg prices at not less than the day's closing quotations. This the markets did, and wheat futures at Chicago closed 4¾ to 6½ cents a bushel higher today.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, sponsor of numerous Administration measures recently, is currently pushing legislation to provide $500,000,000 additional for price-supporting Government loans on cotton, corn, wheat and other major crops.

Officials said the Commodity Credit Corporation, whose borrowing power would be increased by Byrnes' bill, had sufficient borrowing authority at present to finance the wheat loan at the rates announced by Wallace.

But, they added, in view of a possibility that farm exports might be reduced nearly one-third in the next fiscal year, the corporation's existing borrowing power would probably not be adequate to carry all crop-loan programs that might be undertaken.

The Supreme Court's decision yesterday, upholding the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937, apparently opened the way for legislation to fix farm prices outright if that should be deemed necessary later. Reliable sources said, however, that the possibility of the Administration proposing such legislation soon was remote. Such a step would be likely only in a grave emergency, they added.

Coal Act Upheld By Supreme Court

ger in these times from the coercive activities of those who, in the delusion of racial or religious conceit, would incite violence and breaches of the peace in order to deprive others of their equal rights to the exercise of their liberties."

Justice Douglas wrote in the coal case that operators had suffered financial distress and the miners acute poverty because of the bituminous industry's instability.

"It was the judgment of Congress," he said, "that price fixing and the elimination of unfair competitive practices were appropriate methods for prevention of the financial ruin, low wages, poor working conditions, strikes and disruption of the channels of trade which followed in the wake of the demoralized price structures in this industry."

Congressional Power

The decision affirmed a ruling in favor of the coal act by a Federal District Court at Little Rock, Ark. The act was passed three years ago after the Supreme Court invalidated the Guffey Coal Act of 1935.

"The fixing of prices, the proscription of unfair trade practices and the establishment of marketing rules respecting such sales of bituminous coal constitute regulations within the competence of Congress under the commerce clause," Douglas asserted.

"To invalidate this act," he said, "we would have to deny the existence of power on the part of Congress under the commerce clause to deal directly and specifically with those forces which in its judgment should not be permitted to dislocate an important segment of our economy and to disrupt and burden interstate channels of trade."

In other decisions yesterday the court:

Agreed to reopen the National Relations Board case against the Republic Steel Corporation, limiting the review to the NLRB order that the company reimburse relief agencies for amounts paid to strikers.

Ordered the Bradford (R. I.) Dyeing Association to bargain with the C. I. O. textile workers' union and praised the NLRB for "solicitously" guarding the right of both parties to "a full and fair hearing."

Denied the Shasta County (Calif.) district attorney's request for reconsideration of last month's decision holding the county's anti-picketing ordinance unconstitutional.

Ruled that there can be no judicial review of the "legislative judgment" reached by the President and the Tariff Commission in administering the flexible tariff provisions of the 1930 tariff act.

Relief Funds Sent to Paris By Red Cross

$500,000 Cabled to Aid Refugees; Pershing Supports Drive

The American Red Cross yesterday cabled an additional $500,000 to Paris for refugee aid as Gen. John J. Pershing threw his support behind the Red Cross drive for a $10,000,000 war relief fund.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, stated yesterday that he contemplated sending another $500,000 "in a few days." He said that the action followed cabled reports stating that there are more than 5,000,000 refugees flooding central France.

Gen. Pershing, in his statement here, recalled that "only two decades ago, thousands of our best men gave their lives in the hope that the world would never resort to war again." He said that the United States, since 1918, "has done all in its power to make peace prevail," adding: "There is one thing which all Americans can do now, and that is to unite to alleviate the horrors of war for the civilians in the stricken nations."

Full support of the Nation's Girl Scouts was also thrown behind the drive yesterday. Davis received a wire from Mrs. Paul Rittenhouse, national director, stating that the "Girl Scout organization will aid Red Cross in every possible way."

Leonard W. de Gast, director of the Federation of Churches and secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was appointed chairman of the clergy and church unit of the local campaign committee yesterday. Additional contributions swelled the total to $17,695.50 for the District. The Capital's quota is $150,000.

Contributors here yesterday included Justice James C. McReynolds, Mrs. William Howard Taft, Gen. William Crozier and Mrs. Crozier, Capt. Paul H. Bastedo, Maj. Gist Blair, Hewitt Myers, Clarence A. Aspinwall, Ord Preston, William F. Hitt, Charles R. Ely, Mrs. L. R. Longworth, A. C. Miller, Dr. John B. Nichols, John I. Hass and Wade H. Ellis.

Taber Begins Fight Today to Return Relief to States

By the United Press

A Republican drive to return administration of relief to the States will begin in the House today after general debate ends on a bill appropriating $1,111,745,916 for relief in the 1941 fiscal year, of which $975,650,000 would be earmarked for WPA.

The movement is led by Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee and persistent critic of New Deal relief policies. His amendment would authorize Federal grants-in-aid to individual localities on a 75-25 per cent basis, with the Government bearing most of the cost.

The House is expected to spend most of today on amendments to the bill and to pass it tomorrow. Senate Majority Leader Barkley said after a White House conference today that he hopes to bring the measure up in the Senate early next

Wage Increases Foreseen For Navy Yard Mechanics

Early wage increases for navy yard mechanics to meet private industry competition for skilled workers appeared a certainty yesterday.

That prospect, resulting indirectly from the European war and, more directly, from growing emphasis upon the necessity of stepping up production of war essentials, is seen by union labor spokesmen interviewed by The Post. Other predictions include:

There will be no shortage of trained mechanics if diligent efforts are undertaken to marshal them, not only those now following their trades but others who had to lay down their tools in the last few years because of the depression, age restrictions and other causes.

Uncle Sam will reduce the red tape which now hinders applicants for mechanical jobs in navy yards and other military establishments.

Large scale shifting of industrial workers from private to Federal pay rolls is unlikely.

"More money for navy yard men seems likely to come out of the Navy Wage Review Board hearings which open June 11," said John P. Frey, president of the American Federation of Labor Metal Trades Department.

"The last hearings were held in 1929 and there have been no changes in wage schedules since then, except for reductions ordered under the first and second economy acts and later restored."

Regardless of the outcome, Frey said he foresees no wholesale descent of privately employed mechanics upon navy yards, or vice versa. He pointed out that while highly skilled workmen on the outside draw larger paychecks, a balancing factor is the annual and sick leave and superannuated pension for which navy yard employes are eligible.

At least 90 per cent of the yard workers throughout the country are members of unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. metal trades department, Frey said. Their international and local representatives will hold an all-day caucus here June 10 to adopt policies preliminary to the opening of Navy Wage Review Board hearings on the following day.

The board has three Navy and two labor union members, one each from the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

There are 160 occupations and graded types of work in navy yards, said Alifas, all of which will be subject to wage reviews at the June hearings. About one-third of the total number of workers are members of the machinists' union, he asserted.

House Unit Approves McGehee Bill

Measure to Reduce Payroll Tax To 2.7% Reported Favorably; Gas Increase Revived

Assurance that amendments to the District Unemployment Compensation Act will be considered by the House next Monday came yesterday as the House District Committee voted to report favorably the latest McGehee bill.

The measure, carrying a pay-roll tax reduction to 2.7 per cent and liberalized benefits, broke a deadlock that had tied up previous legislation.

At the same time the committee revived a bill it had tabled earlier in the session to increase the local gasoline tax 1 cent a gallon to bring it more in line with the gas tax in Maryland and Virginia.

A special subcommittee was appointed by Chairman Randolph, author of the bill, to study the proposal and report back although it was admitted that there is no chance of enacting the legislation into law at this session of Congress.

Poage Named Chairman

Representative Poage (Democrat), of Texas, who was sharply critical of the low District gas tax, was named chairman of the subcommittee. Other members named are: Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio; Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana; Sandager (Republican), of Rhode Island, and Goodwin (Republican), of Iowa.

Later Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee which had tabled the bill, said he was to be substituted for Hunter on the subcommittee.

The committee discussed at some length the District tax in comparison with gas taxes in other States.

"I think the District tax is too low," said Randolph, who added that the threatened loss of $700,000 in Federal aid would not matter as the extra cent would raise $1,600,000 in additional revenue, which his bill would divert to general revenue expenditures.

Benefits Increased

The Unemployment Compensation Act amendments, as approved by the committee, carried the indorsements of both factions of organized labor and the Board of Trade.

Besides cutting the pay-roll tax by approximately $1,000,000 the bill increases maximum benefits to $18 a week for a period of 19 weeks, or 50 per cent of earnings during the base period, whichever is less.

Four other minor bills were approved by the committee. They would permit Federal and District employes to appear as witnesses in court without the loss of pay or annual leave, would give the Juvenile Court equal jurisdiction with the District Court in non-support cases, would authorize the Commissioners to rent parking space in the Municipal Center, and would raise the pay of board of examiners of steam engineers from $3 to $10 a day when meetings are held.

Worn Teeth Displace Jaw, Dentists Told

Clinic Speaker Also Blames Lack of Back Teeth for Condition

A patient may have a displaced jaw-point and never suspect it as the cause of such symptoms as a headache or a burning on the side of the tongue, a speaker told the Five-State Postgraduate Clinic of the District of Columbia Dental Society yesterday.

Dr. Louis S. Block, of Louisville, Ky., spoke on this problem, which was considered as the closing topic on yesterday afternoon's program.

"Loss of back teeth and failure to replace them, or even abnormal wear of back teeth, may allow the lower jaw to be displaced," Dr. Block pointed out. "This displacement may cause pressure on the nerves, which may give symptoms of headache or pain in the side of the face and neck. Head noises too may arise from this malnutrition."

"We are stressing the importance of replacing all lost teeth," he added in an interview which followed his talk. The program was at the Willard Hotel, where the clinic will cnotinue through Thursday. The registration of approximately 1,500 on the opening day yesterday, was expected to increase today.

With slides to illustrate their talks, Dr. Block and Dr. Harris showed the method of making corrective appliances for a displaced jaw-joint.

"The dental treatment consists of building up on the biting surfaces of the teeth so that the jaw is restored to normal. We make 'stilts' of silver or gold," Dr. Block said.

The extent of this condition was indicated when Dr. Block said that he and Dr. Elam Harris, also of Louisville, were "reporting jointly on 600 cases in the past seven years."

Dr. LeRoy M. Ennis, of Philadelphia, another speaker, said when a patient goes to a dentist for the first time, for any purpose, he should have an X-ray.

Elaborating on his talk in an interview afterward, Dr. Ennis said: "The extraction of a tooth used to be considered a simple proposition. Today it is considered a surgical operation. The possibility of complications following extraction make an X-ray necessary."

Members of the Maryland Park (Md.) Citizens Association will hold their monthly meeting at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Maryland Park High School. Guest speaker will be the Hon. Walter F. Mulligan.

Board to Study Defense Urged By S.A.R. Head

Messmore Kendall, New York attorney and president of the Sons of the American Revolution, yesterday suggested that the President appoint a commission, possibly of civilians, to study American defense needs.

Such a commission, he said, should have the counsel of Army, Navy and Air Force experts, and defense money should be spent "with some regard to the consequences of waste upon the taxpayers and on the debt limit."

"We should be adequately prepared to meet any aggressor, all will agree; but methods of warfare developing in Europe may make some expenditures hurriedly entered into useless," he said.

The president-general presided in the afternoon at the dedication of a tablet in the S. A. R. national headquarters at 1227 Sixteenth street northwest. The tablet was erected in honor of donors toward the building of the headquarters.

Three hundred and fifty delegates were registered last night. The congress recessed at 12:30 p. m. to permit officers, delegates and guests to attend a luncheon in the Dragon Room of the Wardman Park, sponsored by the District of Columbia Society, S. A. R.

At 1:30 p. m., the ladies of the congress were tendered a luncheon at the District of Columbia Chapter House with the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution as hostesses.

The session will open again this morning at 9:20 o'clock with assembly call and entrance of the president general and his party. The audience will sing, "America the Beautiful," and reports will follow.

These will include statements by the historian general, the genealogist general, the chancellor general and the chaplain general. The congress will be held in the Wardman Park at 7:30 o'clock tonight. The election of national officers is scheduled for the morning session tomorrow.

The Benjamin Franklin Committee introduced a resolution yesterday urging the erection in Washington of a utilitarian memorial to Benjamin Franklin. He should be honored, it was said, along with such great Americans as Lincoln and Jefferson.

Labor Unions Back Program For Defense

Convention Votes Unanimous Support Of President's Plan

By the Associated Press

Hagerstown, Md., May 20.—The thirty-fifth annual convention of the Maryland and District of Columbia Federation of Labor adopted unanimously today a resolution "to put into operation this (President Roosevelt's) program of national defense for the protection of the United States from invasion by any foreign foe."

The action was taken after various speakers stressed the seriousness of the international situation.

Secretary of State Francis Petrott, who appeared in place of Gov. O'Conor, said "our freedom and democracy are being threatened," and urged support of the Administration's rearmament program.

"America Can Have Peace"

"If the dictators know that we are prepared they will let us alone," he declared. "America can have peace, but it must be strong on defense."

Gov. O'Conor advised the convention he had an engagement at Frederick tomorrow and hoped to be able to visit Hagerstown later in the day.

The convention took no action on other resolutions, which are expected to be voted on tomorrow.

H. A. Bradley, general organizer for the American Federation of Labor, assailed what he called "the plague of unemployment in the past ten years, "but pointed out that the national defense program should put many men back to work.

Expects More Work

He warned labor, however, that it must fight any attempts to increase working hours, observing that increased industrial activity would put more people to work.

Joseph F. McCurdy, State president, urged in his annual report that Congress immediately vote for adequate funds "so we can courageously maintain our neutrality and elminate any threat of invasion."

He denounced Naziism, fascism and communism, and said "we are thankful the great American Federation of Labor conventions have publicly declared that Communists are barred from membership in our unions."

C. I. O. Takes Stand

The C. I. O. Industrial Union Council last night expressed vigorous opposition to "any attempt to suspend or abrogate the Walsh-Healy act or any other measures that would deprive labor of its gains under the false plea of national defense."

The Walsh-Healy act forces private contractors to follow "prevailing" wage and hour schedules in fulfilling Government contracts.

At its semi-monthly meeting in the United Federal Workers headquarters the council also set up a committee to work for the establishment of an organized program of industrial hygiene in the District.

The I. U. C. also urged the House to adopt the Casey amendment to the WPA bill, which would provide $2,232,000,000 for next year instead o` $975,650,000, which may be spent in eight months. Other resolutions indorsed the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' strike and set up a permanent peace committee.

Police Inspector Edwards, 59, Weds Friend of Late Wife

The bride is Mrs. Clare H. Kidder, 55, of 404 Aspen street northwest.

Not even his superior, Maj. Ernest Brown, superintendent of police, knew of the wedding plans. Officially, Inspector Edwards started his vacation today after being on sick leave since last Wednesday.

The wedding was performed by the Rev. J. S. Johnston in the parish of the Warrenton Methodist Church. Two of Mrs. Kidder's three sons, Charles, of Washington, who observed his first wedding anniversary yesterday, and Atwood, of Detroit, and two of Inspector Edwards' six children, Mrs. Pearl Weaver, of Arlington, and Sergt. T. E. Edwards, of the District police, attended the ceremony.

Mrs. Kidder, a native of Canada, lived in Detroit with her son, Atwood, following the death of her husband three years ago. She later came to Washington to live with her son, Charles. She became friends with Mrs. Edwards, an invalid, and helped nurse her until she died a year ago.

The Edwardses will make their home in Arlington following a honeymoon in the Virginia mountains.

The inspector, who is also chief personnal officer of the Police Department, suffered from a heart ailment last Wednesday and was ordered to take a rest. None of his associates learned of the marriage until after the ceremony.

A veteran policeman, Edwards has a card-index mind, is reputed to know the name of 1,498 Washington bluecoats.

First Lady Helps WPA Show Works

Mrs. Roosevelt Joins In Inviting Nation To Inspect Agency's Accomplishments

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and heads of the Works Projects Administration joined workers in Washington and throughout the country last night in extending to America an invitation to inspect WPA accomplishments.

In Washington 3,000 workers opened "This Work Pays Your Community" week by eating 25-cent dinners in 43 places in the city. The dinners, and similar ones in other sections of the country, were "attended" by Mrs. Roosevelt and Federal officials by means of a broadcast from Station WOL.

"I'm thinking especially tonight of how ours is the task of holding high with all the strength of our hands, and of our minds, and of our hearts, the light of a living democracy in a blacked-out world," Mrs. Roosevelt declared.

"Lesson in Democracy"

She told the WPA workers she was "thrilled over the object lesson in democracy that you are giving the world."

"You've gone up and down America's communities, and with your brain and brawn and nimble fingers, you've been making them better places in which we all may live and work together," she said.

John M. Carmody, Federal works administrator, observed that "perhaps unconsciously this splendid program is demonstrating once again that men and women rust out faster than they wear out."

Harrington Calls WPA Sound

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA commissioner, declared that the experience with WPA "is proving conclusively that the method is a sound one and that the results are of real and tangible value in our national life."

Helen Gahagan, actress and wife of Melvyn Douglas, film star, was another speaker. Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant WPA commissioner, was mistress of ceremonies.

A dinner given by WPA's housekeeping aide project at 61 I street northwest was addressed by Mrs. Elizabeth H. McDuffie, who was introduced as Mrs. Roosevelt's "personal maid." Mrs. McDuffie began by pointing out that she was "just a maid" at the White House, that the position of "personal maid" belonged to another and that she did not care to "usurp her of that honor."

Mrs. McDuffie finished her speech by suggesting a slogan for the project that provides housekeeping assistance in needy homes: "Here Comes Help."

Meeting at White House

The District Commissioners yesterday issued a proclamation inviting Washingtonians to visit WPA projects "to see for themselves what has been done and to make suggestions for improvements of the programs."

Under Mrs. Roosevelt's chairmanship, WPA's National Advisory Committee on Community Service Projects will hold its first meeting at the White House at 10 a. m. today. Among those attending will be Dr. Harold H. Benjamin, dean of the school of education at the University of Maryland; the Rev. Everett Clinchy, director of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, and Mrs. Douglas.

The purpose of the committee is to aid officials in widening community service activities of WPA.

Girl Who Forsook Baby Arrested In Lynchburg

While her 2-month-old baby which she left with a colored woman cooed healthily at Gallinger Hospital, a 19-year-old former waitress last night was being returned to Washington from Lynchburg, Va., to face a charge of abandonment.

The girl, identified by police as Eunice Dowdy, of Lynchburg, was arrested in that city yesterday after loca. police had questioned neighbors near Dupont Circle where they said a blond, blue-eyed girl recently had been seen in the park with an infant.

Arrested in Lynchburg after local police had wired that city the girl is said to have confessed to abandoning the child and was on her way back to Washington in the custody of Detective Joseph Sincavitz and Policewoman Alice Parrish.

Meanwhile at the Fifth Precinct station police were holding for investigation a man said to be the father of the child.

Lynchburg police who arrested the young woman quoted her as saying:

"I could not keep my baby. I didn't have a job . . . I couldn't support her."

Rock Creek Bridge Will Carry 15-Ton Loads, Tests Prove

Fully loaded buses crossing the Massachusetts avenue temporary bridge over Rock Creek park weigh from 15,000 to 25,000 pounds. The sign at the bridge approach warns that the load limit is 12,000 pounds. Actually the bridge has been tested to carry weights up to 15 tons so there is no cause for fear

Although heavier loads than permitted by signs on Massachusetts avenue are allowed to cross the temporary bridge over Rock Creek, District highway officials yesterday said the wooden span is "perfectly safe" for travel and skeptics need have no fear of it collapsing.

Signs at approaches to the temporary bridge limit loads to 12,000 pounds, but actually, said Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director, the span has been tested to carry up to 15 tons.

"The 12,000-pound limit is simply a precautionary measure," Whitehurst said. "It applies to all wooden-surfaced bridges in the District. The 6-ton limit is placed solely to keep heavy trucks from using the temporary structure."

Officials admitted that fully loaded buses which cross the span weigh from 15,000 to 25,000 pounds. However, Whitehurst added, "bus drivers are under careful instructions as to speed and the manner in which they handle their vehicles while traversing the wooden bridge."

It would be difficult, said Whitehurst, to regulate trucks in the same manner. Buses operate across the span under special permission and must comply with set rules.

The way heavy vehicles strike the bridge and the manner in which they drive across are important to safety, Whitehurst said. Trucks were barred, he continued, because it would have been impossible to instruct every local or out-of-town operator on the regulations.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer reported that rush-hour traffic along upper Massachusetts avenue has increased since the temporary bridge was completed. A total of 2,560 vehicles an hour cross the span during peak times, he said, compared to about 1,500 during normal hours.

He said a 5 per cent increase in rush-hour traffic flow has been noted.

Faculty Group Backs Marvin After Attack

The George Washington University Chapter of the American Association of University Professors yesterday adopted a resolution expressing confidence in the administration of Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, whose regime was recently attacked by a group of students and alumni following the resignation of a faculty member.

The resolution expressed the professors' "appreciation of Dr. Marvin's continued interest in developing a faculty code in keeping with the principles of tenure and academic freedom indorsed by the American Association of University Professors."

"In view of certain recent unfortunate publicity concerning tenure and academic freedom at the George Washington University," the resolution continued, "the chapter wishes to go on record as stating that in the opinion of the chapter, Dr. Marvin has abided by both the letter and spirit of the faculty code.

"Furthemore, as the possibility of a national emergency looms, the chapter wishes to voice its confidence in the leadership of the university administration in the difficult days which lie ahead.

Recently, an alumni group requested the American Association of University Professors' committee on academic freedom and tenure to investigate Dr. Marvin's administration as an outgrowth of a controversy involving the resignation of Miss Martha Gibbon as assistant professor on March 7.

Miss Gibbon said she resigned because she had been refused promotion to associate professor, a promotion bringing with it security of tenure. Dr. Marvin said that Miss Gibbon lacked certain requirements for promotion.

On March 29, an investigating committee of the university board of trustees denied Miss Gibbon's claims of "unfair treatment."

House Sends D. C. Supply Bill to Senate

The House yesterday sent to conference the $49,597,890 District supply bill after disagreeing to the $1,406,173 Senate amendments.

Shortly afterward, Senator John Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, tentatively scheduled the first conference for tomorrow morning in the Senate Appropriations Committee room.

House conferees named by Speaker Bankhead are: Chairman Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida, and Representatives Mahon, of Texas; O'Neal, of Kentucky; Rabaut, of Michigan, and Houston, of Kansas, all Democrats; Stefan, of Nebraska; Case, of South Dakota, and Lambertson, of Kansas, Republicans.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan conferred yesterday with Representative Caldwell regarding the Senate amendments.

Caldwell has indicated that he will be willing to accept the larger portion of the Senate additions in so far as they anticipate October income tax collections. He said he will resist any increases which might cause the District to go into the red.

Lincoln Park Unit Charges Fire-Traps

Citizens Urge 25 Buildings in Area Be Replaced; Some Held Health Hazards

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association charged last night that at least 25 buildings in its area are either fire traps or health hazards and asked the Commissioners and the Alley Dwelling Authority to take steps to replace them.

The charge was made in a report by the streets and avenues committee, which made a survey of the area. The committee was ordered to continue its study and to press the matter before the proper authorities.

The association expressed disapproval of "the movement on foot" to replace 34 old school buildings with 14 new schools. The resolution stated that "the erection of such ponderous buildings "would force children to travel great distances, crossing many streets; in constant danger of life and limb."

The association urged the rebuilding of present schools where possible. "Schools," it said, "should be brought to the children, not the children to the schools, where great distances are involved."

Another resolution indorsed the stand of the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations proposing a suburban railway system to reduce traffic congestion during rush hours and urged the District government to construct a "superhighway" to parallel the tracks. This, it said, would not only reduce congestion, but would obviate the necessity for underpasses at Scott and Dupont circles.

Plans to construct the new Abbot Vocational School in Brentwood Park was opposed. A resolution expressing disapproval stated that construction there would mar the beauty in Brentwood Park, when there are many other suitable sites in the Northeast area.

The meeting was held at the Bryan School. Elections scheduled for the meeting were postponed because of the pressure of other busines.

Brookland-Woodridge

The Brookland-Woodridge Businessmen's Association last night dispatched a letter to the House and Senate conferees urging them to include funds in the District appropriation bill for "not less than 25 additional police officers."

The association stated that it was convinced that 100 additional men are needed.

Another resolution censured the District government for renting Anacostia Park to the circus for $400. It declared that in previous years the circus had paid $2,000 to private individuals for similar areas, and pointed out that special police protection alone cost the District $2,400, a net loss of $2,000 for the rental.

The association agreed to donate trophies to the Twelfth Precinct Pistol Club for its tournament June 16. Decision was made to hold the association's annual summer outing June 23 at the summer home of the president, R. John Boehs.

Rev. W. A. Keese to Talk

The Rev. William A. Keese, of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, will be guest speaker at the Goodwill Industries chapel services at 8:15 a. m. today in the organization's auditorium, 1216 New Hampshire avenue northwest. The Rev. F. J. Bishop will speak Friday, May 24.

M-G-M Runs Far Ahead Of Production Schedule

Many Ace Pictures Ready for Summer Release; Last-Minute War Films Reach Local Screens; This, That and the Other About the Theater

AS SUGGESTED by this department last Sunday—this being the open season for motion picture producing companies' sales conventions—plans of the "majors" for the 1940-41 season gradually are coming to light.

BELL

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayor, for example, comes in with the announcement that it will release 52 feature pictures, 78 short subjects and 104 newsreels during the impending 12 months. With a regional convention now in session at the Shoreham, William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for Loew's, Inc., an affiliate of M-G-M, disclosed at luncheon yesterday that his company is in a better fortified position at the moment than ever before at this time of year.

Just back from Hollywood, Mr. Rodgers made known that only a week or so ago, he had previewed finished prints of seven features of the first rank to be released during the summer months. Among these were "Susan and God," with Joan Crawford and Fredric March; Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor, in "Waterloo Bridge;" Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, in "New Moon," and Spencer Tracy, in "Edison the Man." Frequently before at this season, production has been so near the release deadline that it has been necessary to fly prints across the country to fulfill booking dates. No such emergency exists at present, insofar as M-G-M is concerned.

Among other pictures in early prospect are "Boom Town," with Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr—the first time Gable and Colbert have appeared in the same cast since the memorable Academy sweepstakes winner, "It Happened One Night;" William Powell and Myrna Loy in "I Love You Again," Katharine Hepburn in "The Philadelphia Story," Greta Garbo in "Madame Curie," Norma Shearer in "Tonight at 8:30" and numerous others.

Not only nice going, but speedy.

While no definite information was confided as to the cost of the 1940-41 release program, a great deal was said, "off the record," about the astounding gross sales amassed by "Gone With the Wind." It has been stated further that $2,750,000 will be expended in advertising the new season's product, "the bulk of it in the daily newspapers." The M-G-M-Loew experience with G. W. T. W., according to Howard Strickling, West Coast publicity director, has indicated that "there is no ceiling to the possibilities in attendance and revenue—no limit to the business possibilities of exceptional pictures."

The Metropolitan is stepping up its opening of "Twenty-one Days Together." Costarring Academy Award Winner Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, neither of whom needs any further introduction to the theatergoing public of Washington at this late date, this new subject will make its Capital bow on the Met's screen tomorrow morning. Leslie Banks, another distinguished British actor, remembered for his work with Charles Laughton and Maureen O'Hara in "Jamaica Inn," heads the supporting cast.

"The Great Waltz," starring Fernand Gravet, Luise Rainer and Meliza Korjus, while we are more or less on the subject, will be publicly previewed at the Little Theater tonight, following the final showing of the current French hit, "Harvest." And at noon today, the drama desks will be given a preview peek at Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor in "Waterloo Bridge," already mentioned in these dispatches.

Late advices are to the effect that next season's six subscription plays, presented at the National by the Theater Guild-American Theater Society, will include Ernest Hemingway's "The Fifth Column," William Saroyan's Critics Circle and Pulitzer Prize play, "The Time of Your Life" and probably the same author's "Love's Old Sweet Song." The other three will be announced at a later date.

Arthur Menken, famous Paramount News cameraman and reporter, has done it again. It was not so long ago that his pictures of the Nazi blitzkrieg in Norway were the first to reach local screens. Yesterday afternoon at 3:30, Robert Denton, Washington manager of Paramount News, issued a hurry call for a preview of Menkin's exclusive pictures of the British evacuation of Norway and the ensuing battles between waves of Nazi air bombers and the battleships of the Anglo-French convoy. Having passed through British censorship, the pictures show no actual sinkings, but that there were some is attested by the lowering of the fleet's flags to half-mast. The first of the invasion of Belgium also is shown and makes 1914 look like a Sunday school picnic in comparison. The Belgian refugees present a spectacle that is the epitome of pathos and despair. These last-minute pictures went on view at the Earle, Metropolitan and Trans-Lux theaters late yesterday afternoon.

Shudders-and-Terror Note

Even in censored form, these films represent something of which the Western Hemisphere wants not even a fragmentary part. Nothing but fragmentary parts are left wherever the Nazis pass.

Costars in Remake of a Former Hit

VIVIEN LEIGH AND ROBERT TAYLOR
to be seen soon in the principal roles of the new screen version of "Waterloo Bridge," first filmed nine years ago with Mae Clark and Kent Douglas in the foremost roles. Miss Leigh, the Scarlett O'Hara of "Gone With the Wind," was launched toward stardom opposite Mr. Taylor in "A Yank at Oxford," made in England some three or four years ago

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

PARE LORENZ, head of the U. S. Film Service, has been unable to secure a Federal appropriation for the continuance of his office—and so he will set up an independent movie unit with the staff which helped make the movies, "The River," "The Plough That Broke the Plains" and "Fight for Life" . . . Lorenz went before the Senate Appropriations Committee, where Senator McKellar asked him why he was present. "For the U. S. Film Service appropriation," said Lorenz . . . "What's that?" asked McKellar, and Lorentz told him . . . "What? The Government making movies?" McKellar demanded. "Since when?" . . . "Since 1912," Lorenz informed . . . "That's unconstitutional," the Senator proclaimed . . . "When the Constitution was written," Lorenz reminded, "nobody dreamed of moving pictures" . . . "Well, if John Marshall had dreamed about it," said McKellar, "he'd have ruled it unconstitutional."

ARRANGEMENTS WERE made for the President and his circle to see a special performance of "There Shall Be No Night." The events of the past few days, however, disrupted this plan . . . Robert Sherwood will undergo hospital treatment . . . Gus Anderson, jr., of "Margin for Error," is sailing on the Manhattan to join an ambulance unit in France . . . Bertrand Russell's message to the New York courts will be found in the June issue of Harper's. His article will be called "The Functions of a Teacher" . . . Gov. Lehman's bill to limit the interest rates charged by small-loan companies was killed by the Legislature. But the largest of these companies now is reducing its rates to the limit prescribed by that doomed bill.

WALTER BATCHELOR, who is Fred Allen's agent, signed Allen for the new Texaco radio show. The word spread quickly through Broadway—and among the first to reach Batchelor was an agent representing George Olsen's Orchestra . . . "Hello, Walter," the agent began, "I've got a great idea for your Allen show. Why not get Olsen's band for the show? He's terrific" . . . "You're telling me?" replied Batchelor—and hung up . . . Batchelor was married to Ethel Shutta—who then married George Olsen.

JAME CANNON, the writer, was operated upon at Fifth Avenue Hospital. In the operating room, just before he was given an anesthetic, Cannon looked at all the doctors and told them: "With so many of you guys ready to cut me up I feel just like Europe" . . . The Barrel-of-Fun reopened and is resuming operations . . . Harry Tierney, author of "Irene"—both the Broadway and movie versions—is negotiating for the movie sale of his "Rio Rita." Jeanette McDonald is expected to play the title role . . . Irene Castle is sponsoring a dinner for her pet charity, "Orphans of the Storm," at which she'll exhibit the only motion picture she and Vernon Castle ever made—"The Whirl of Life."

LEE STRASBERG, who was one of the founders of the Group Theater and who directed "The Fifth Column," met Katharine Locke, of that show, and confessed that he is writing a book about the theater . . . "I'm so excited about it," Strasberg said, "I just can't wait" . . . "But why so excited?" asked Miss Locke . . . "Because," he answered, "I want to read it."

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT now is at his island in Bomoseen, Vt., where he has begun to violate his doctor's orders . . . Woollcott, who had been too active, was advised to undergo the "Silent Treatment"—to speak no words to anyone and spend all his time in complete rest. "Woollcott is not Woollcott—unless he's speaking," said Alec—and so he's speaking . . . "Your Federal Civil Service," the new book by Marenberg & O'Brien, is an expert job by two of the experts in that field . . . Mr. and Mrs. Paul Douglas, the newlyweds, had a real housewarming. The bridegroom applied a match to the seat of the rush-bottom chair on which the 250-pound Jack Smart sat and then threw the burning chair into the fireplace . . . Milton Berle has been admited to ASCAP.

JOE MOSS, the band leader, will furnish the music at the White House reception to the Washington newspapermen . . . Moss, a veteran at these White House functions, always plays the President's favorite songs. This time, however, he has been asked to include one new tune—at the spcial request of the President. The addition is "The Fire Song," from Wagner's "Die Walkuere."

THE MAN WITH the biggest smile at the low-grossing World's Fair these days is Grover Whalen . . . Billy Rose will close his Barbary Coast show at the fair for two weeks to make revisions he thinks are necessary . . . The Criminal Bar Association hitherto frowned upon by the big-name lawyers, is getting a rush of new business. Its newest members include some of the most elegant practioners in town . . . Otis Skinner, who will be '82 next month, returned from his South American cruise very much disappointed. He had arranged to fly over the Andes, but was forced to cancel the flight because his ship wouldn't wait. The veteran Skinner therefore made a date with the pilot, to return next year and the year after and fly over the Andes then.

Cukor as 'Emoter' Snapped by Joan

An album of photographs, showing Director George Cukor "emoting" virtually every scene of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayers "Susan and God," and also enacting most of the parts in the picture, was Joan Crawford's gift to nim upon the completion of camera work.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, May 20.

Ida Lupino, known as a kindie, comes by that trait honestly. Her father, Stanley Lupino, wrote her recently of his old valet's death, and Ida told me that when Stanley, as a young man sold papers daytime and slept in Hyde Park nights, he was thrown out of the park one night by a Bobby. A few years later, that same Bobby went to the theater where Stanley was playing and asked for a job. Stanley took him on as valet and kept him the rest of his life.

While Hattie MacDaniels is out making history on personal appearances, showing and wearing "Mammy's" red silk petticoat, her brother Sam has a nice part in "The Sentence" with George Brent and Dick Barthelmess.

Dwight Taylor read a play young Will Bowers wrote—liked it so much he helped get backing on Broadway. It was "Where Do We Go From Here?" Now Bowers has written another called "Back to Eden." Dwight will not only help finance it, but put it on for him.

Mother Hardy, of that family, is wondering whether she should rhumba in the next Hardy picture. Now I don't rhumba as Mrs. Aldrich, but I certainly do in real life, when I'm lucky enough to get a partner.

Gene Fowler had a set-to with his pal Grantland Rice back at Louisville, because Gene's constant companion was a beautiful young girl and he wouldn't introduce her to his pals. Finally the girl said, "Please don't get upset. I'm Joan, Gene's daughter, and he treated me to this trip from my school in Washington, D. C.

Before Priscilla Lane ankled out of "Money and the Woman," which left Dennis Morgan without a picture, she should have seen him in "Flight Angels." That boy's got what it takes, and one day soon she'll be begging to play opposite him.

William Saroyan, who declined the Pulitzer Prize for "The Time of Your Life," has an arden colony of Armenian disciples up near Fresno, Calif. All the kids are hoping some day to be able to imitate his style.

Aben Kandel, whose "City for Conquest" will star Ann Sheridan and Jimmy Cagney, is doing adaptation of Elmer Rice's "Two on an Island," which is all about same locale and people as Kandel's book.

Brian Donlevy, our pet screen villain, became a hero up at Big Bear on location for "Brigham Young." The lodge caught fire, Vincent Price was overcome by smoke and Don carried him to safety. Wouldn't you know it would be a he-man, instead of a woman, who would have that chance?

Director Alfred Hitchcock weighs 250 pounds—didn't lose one while making "Rebecca." Told me he'd shopped

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 20 (INS).—George Brent, who is always so amiable, and a lad who has never refused a role handed him, is backing out of co-starring with Bette Davis in "The Letter." It isn't because he and Bette, who once were aflame, have cooled, but merely that he objected to playing a mere husband role which he felt did not give him a chance to act.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I had heard that Warners were suspending him, but George told me that he is still busy on "The Sentence," and, as he understood it, his bosses are delighted that he didn't want the role. "You see," said George, "I hear they have Herbert Marshall, and he will be much better." Of course, Bart's accent is much more British than George's, who was born in the Emerald Isle. Every so often George unconsciously reverts to a brogue and that's one of his charms.

I had a chance to talk with Douglas Fairbanks, jr., at the Zanuck's dinner for Winthrop Aldrich. Young Doug told me the plans he has for co-directing his next two pictures. Before he starts his characterization of "O. Henry," for Borros Morris, he will star in and help direct an original by Ben Hecht, for Columbia.

There is no reason why he shouldn't have original ideas and contribute something worth while. I know of no actor who had more vision than Doug's father, and he has inherited so many other qualities from his famous parent.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jackie Cooper's new girl friend is Jimmie Rogers, daughter of a Palm Springs business man; Henry Blanke's mother is on her way to America from Germany and Mrs. Blanke will leave for New York to meet her; Helen Mack and Pat Weaver, New York advertising man, are really aflame; Jon Hall is desperately ill with flu and has been threatened with pneumonia; a happy foursome dining and dancing at Ciro's were the Gary Coopers and the Fred MacMurrays; there is lots of chit-chat that Judith Barrett, now Mrs. Lin Howard, is also pricing cradles.

Judy Garland will be graduated from High School in three weeks and she will receive her diploma at a private presentation on the M-G-M lot; Carole Landis is an everyday visitor at the bedside of Willis Hunt, jr., who is in the hospital for an operation; Ilona Massey and Alan Curtis have a seven-day-a-week date.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Nats' Rally in Ninth Fails, Chisox Win, 5-4

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, May 20.—Now that he has swatted the tar out of the best golf players in the world in the Goodall Round Robin tournament, little Ben Hogan must turn around and prove himself worthy of consorting in the U. S. Open championship with not only the men he just beat, but also a lot of blokes named Joe, who couldn't carry Ben's golf canes.

POVICH

To get in the Open, which will be played early next month at the Canterbury Club, in Cleveland, Hogan must join a motley horde of 1,160 golfers which tees off next Monday morning to try to gain one of the 139 places which are open on the tournament's draw sheet. The U. S. Open field, in case you didn't know, is limited to 170 players. This total is made up of the first 30 finishers in the previous Open, plus the boiling down to 139 of the all-comers (the 1,159 and Hogan) plus the home pro at the host club, a Mr. Crowder.

Hogan didn't finish in the first 30 in last year's Open at Philadelphia. Consequently—and despite the miraculous golf he has been playing this winter—he'll have to go out there and battle to get one of those 139 places.

And it's not as easy as it might sound. He'll try to qualify in what is called the New York District. The U. S. G. A. probably will decide to take ten players from this region. That is, the ten top men of the three or four hundred golfers who try for places in this area will be visaed into the big meet.

Hogan should be one of them, but it's more than possible that he'll muff it. He's not a fellow with too much energy. He lost four or five pounds winning the Goodall, and has promised to play in the Metropolitan Open this Friday, Saturday and Sunday, which should take a lot more out of him. Then the next day he must qualify for a tournament whose doors should automatically be open to him.

There will be a lot of tough golfers in the local elimination trials trying to snuff him out, including Gene Sarazen, Willie Turnesa, Frank Strafaci, Dick Chapman, Ray Billows, the three Argentine pros now in this country, including Martine Pose and Frank Walsh, Al Brosch, the Long Island Open champion, and others of note.

Last year Jimmy Thomson and Walter Hagen failed to qualify and had to sit out the year's No. 1 tournament, even though day in and day out they were ridiculously superior to all but a handful of the 170 players who got in.

It doesn't make much sense. The Masters' Tournament, at Augusta, has a much better way of handling these things. It holds open a couple of places, to be filled by the leading money-winning pros along the winter circuit—at least the two leading men who were missed in the original invitations.

Making Hogan qualify for the U. S. Open (which will give him his first real opportunity to make some money) is like demanding of Joe Louis that he clean up a gang of dock-wallopers before he's eligible to defend his title against Arturo Godoy.

One of those publicity blurbs which are written to stoke wastebaskets has considerable meat. It is from the Hollywood (Cal.) Turf Club, and it concerns the fact that Negro jockeys, once plentiful, are becoming extinct.

The blurb writer with some justification blames the disappearance to white jockeys who made a practice of riding colored riders into pockets, blind switches and the like. So much so that the owners and trainers were afraid of hiring colored jocks to ride their mounts.

The last colored jockey of any note was L. Barcene who, according to the publicity handout, fell under suspicious circumstances during the 1929 season and never was much good thereafter. Most of the boys who might have gone on to become jockeys stopped at being exercise boys. In fact, Marshall Lilley, who works for the Greentree Stable, is said to be the best exercise rider in the country. He is a colored man of nearly 50 years and has been given credit for bringing along Twenty Grand.

One of the great jockeys of all time was colored: Isaac Murphy. He and Earl Sande are the only jockeys who ever rode three Kentucky Derby winners. Murphy rode the first three winners in the American Derby, and the fourth was ridden by another colored jock. Twelve Kentucky Derbies were won by colored riders, before the strikingly unfair methods began to be practiced.

Medical science last week-end safely passed through its most harrowing period since the expose of the tonsil racket, when Dizzy Dean and Lefty Gomez were treated simultaneously in the same hospital.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Chicago, May 20.—The fight we want to see is the Henry Armstrong-Lew Jenkins affair which Promoter Mike Jacobs has scheduled for late July. We want to see it because not until he has licked Armstrong will we be convinced that Jenkins is anything more than a lucky guy who happened along on a night when Yvonne Dionne might have given Ambers a stiff battle.

CONSIDINE

The night Jenkins tagged Ambers with the punches that put the lightweight champion down four times and finally knocked him out. Ambers was ripe for it. For days he had been drying out to make the 135-pound limit and he no more resembled the bristling, belligerent Ambers than I resemble Gable. He was feeble, overconfident and an easy target.

This is no attempt to detract from the decisiveness of Jenkins' victory. You can't complain about a challenger who walks out of his corner at the opening bell and tags the champion on the chin with a right hand that dumps the title on the floor. That's what Jenkins did after a brief exchange in a neutral corner. He hit Ambers as Ambers doubtless had never been hit before. No other man ever knocked Ambers out.

With Jenkins' punching ability there is no quarrel. The first three of the four times he put Ambers on the floor, he did it with clean shots to the chin. On one occasion, in the third round, he did it with the second half of a one-two punch, a left hook to the jaw after a right had missed. If Jenkins isn't the hardest punching lightweight since McLarnin, he is at least the fastest-punching lightweight since Johnny Kilbane.

But when he licked Ambers, he licked a tired old man of the prize ring. Jenkins' first punch didn't do Ambers in, although it did him no good. Ambers weathered that first round nicely enough and there was still time to bring his ring cunning into play and at least outbox the tyro from Texas. But Ambers simply didn't have it that night.

Like he has done in virtually his evry fight, the herky-jerky Amebrs actually dropped his hands and invited Jenkins to take a shot at his chin. But that night the old hair-trigger reflexes were gone and Ambers stood transfixed as Jenkins reached him with long punches, unable this night to slip the blows he used to laugh at. It was while Ambers stood in the center of the ring with his guard down that Jenkins punched him twice on the chin after the bell ended the third round.

Asked about that incident in the dressing room after the fight, Jenkins was properly apologetic. "I couldn't hear the bell in the uproar," he said. "I didn't know the round had ended. The fact that Ambers was standing there with his hands at his sides didn't mean that the round was over as far as I was concerned. He was dropping his guard a half dozen times a round."

The suspicion we are holding is that Jenkins will never get the clean shots at Armstrong that he had at Ambers, although we concede that if he tagged Armstrong on the chin with the same punches he unloosed at Ambers, dusky Henry would go down, too, perhaps to stay.

But Armstrong won't offer Jenkins the target that Ambers did. In Armstrong's book it is a sin to expose the chin. He fights with his jaw tucked well beneath his shoulders and takes punches on his brow and his skull. Jenkins is apt to crack a hand on the Negro's skull if he stands off and takes long shots at Armstrong. It is conceivable that Armstrong can be outpointed, but it will be a new adventure for him if he is knocked out.

What will happen to Jenkins when Armstrong begins blitzkrieging all over the ring as he is certain to do? How well can Jenkins take it? On the one occasion when Ambers banged him on the chin, Jenkins was a sickly looking individual. Maybe it was fortunate for him that the bell called Ambers to his corner. Armstrong isn't a one-punch guy. He pours 'em. Somehow we have an idea he'll whip Jenkins without undue exertion.

Smith Holds Yankees To 3 Hits, Tribe Wins

Indians Turn Back Champions, 10-2, and Plunge Them Into Cellar as Former Minor Leaguer Checks Bats; Heath Leads Attack

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 20.—Al Smith, a southpaw pitcher resurrected from the minors this spring by the Indians, held the New York Yankees to three hits today as Cleveland humiliated the world champions, 10 to 2, and sent them back to the American League cellar.

Smith had the Yankees shut out on one hit (a double by Buster Mills in the second) for eight innings, but in the ninth Bill Knickerbocker singled, Joe DiMaggio walked and Bill Dickey doubled for two runs.

Dickey, benched because of the weakness he has shown against left-handers, got into the game when Buddy Rosar hurt his hand on a foul tip in the second inning.

Spud Chandler held the Tribe scoreless for three innings, but rain interrupted the game for more than half an hour and he lost his effectiveness. Jeff Heath led the assault that followed with two home runs. Altogether, the Indians assembled 17 hits off three Yankee hurlers.

Clevelnad scored five runs in the fifth, Ken Keltner and Smith himself hitting doubles when the bases twice were loaded.

Estelle Page Fires 74 for Medal Honors

By the Associated Press

Fort Worth, Tex., May 20.—Genial Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page burned par in a wind-harried round of 74 to capture medalist honors of the Women's Southern Golf Association today.

Two strokes behind came National Champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex.

Calm, deliberate play that branched into the spectacular because of split-the-pin iron shots enabled Mrs. Page to card 36-38—74, one under women's par. A magnificent start, four consecutive pars and a grand eagle three on the 450-yard fifth, gave momentum to a round marred only by an out of bounds shot on the thirteenth.

On the fifth she belted great shots to the green and coolly dunked an 8-foot putt for her eagle.

The finest comeback and the best nine holes of the day was recorded by slender Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta, Ga., youngster with the sound swing. Out in 42 after straying far and wide in the rather brisk wind, she carded six pars and three birdies for 35 on the home nine and her third ranking 77.

Higgins Hits Three Homers; Tigers Win, 10-7

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 20.—Frank (Pinky) Higgins hit three home runs in successive trips to the plate, batted in seven runs and enabled the Detroit Tigers to beat the league-leading Boston Red Sox 10 to 7 today.

Higgins, who equaled a much-tied major league mark with his home-run barrage, made the first two off Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove and the other off Jack Wilson. Rudy York was on base when Higgins homered in the fourth and fifth innings and Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg were on the sacks when he hit for the circuit in the seventh and clinched victory for Detroit.

Herb Hash, who replaced Grove starting the Tiger seventh and walked two men and pitched one ball to another before being lifted for Wilson, was charged with the loss, while Lywood Rowe, who relieved Tommy Bridges, received credit for the win. It was Detroit's first victory over the Red Sox in three games this year.

Two singles and a long fly by Williams gave Boston a one-run lead in the first and Grove made it 2 to 0 with a homer in th third.

The Tigers went ahead in the fourth when Higgins got his first homer and Ervin (Pete) Fox followed with a single, scoring on George Tebbetts' double.

In the fifth the Red Sox again took command when Jimmy Foxx hit his tenth homer of the year with the bases loaded, but Grove could not hold the lead.

Higgins got his second homer in the fifth after the Tigers had managed a run on a walk to Gehringer, a sacrifice and York's double.

Jeffra Unimpressive In Defeat of Archibald

6,500 Fans Not Convinced That Either Fighter Could Extend Scalzo; Butcher Tactics Win Easy Decision for Baltimore Featherweight

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, May 20.—A butchershop technique gave Baltimore its fifth world's boxing championship in local fight history tonight as Harry Jeffra ranted and roared through 15 rounds to take an unanimous decision over Joey Archibald, of Providence, R. I., before 5,000 fans in the Coliseum.

It was Baltimore's first taste of a championship boxing match in 25 years.

By his victory, Jeffra avenged a highly unpopular decision Archibald took over him last fall in Washington's Griffith Stadium, but his triumph lacked the touch of a real champion.

Harry and Joey were fighting for the Maryland and New York version of the 126-pound crown, but despite the fact that the customers paid $13,000 to see the business, the impression still lingered that Petey Scalzo, the National Boxing Association champion, could take both boys on in one night and still come out on top.

Town Goes Wild

When Announcer Nate Bass boomed out, "The winner and new world's champion," that was as far as he could get. Ringsiders stormed the ring, and Jeffra and his seconds gave a demonstration that would make a jitterbug convention turn green with envy.

Harry's victory made him the first holder of two world's boxing championships in Baltimore's history, and the town went wild despite the slight taint attached to the title he won here tonight.

Jeffra formerly held undisputed possession of the world's bantamweight championship. He lost it back to Sixto Escobar, who recently retired the crown. Escobar, incidentally, stepped into the ring before the fight to challenge the winner.

Jeffra Forces Pace

Jeffra and Archibald put up a terrific battle, but the only thing making for a championship atmosphere was the presence in the ring of Arthur Donovan, New York's No. 1 referee.

The Baltimorean tore out of his corner in the early rounds with the apparent determination to make short work of the affair.

He slammed Archibald to the canvas in the second round with a chopping right he used much in the fashion of a meat cleaver. Archibald went down on his face, banging his head a terrific lick on the floor boards underneath the canvas.

In the roar Donovan could not pick up the count until it had reached five, and Archibald was sitting on his haunches gazing dizzily out into the crowd.

Archibald came off the canvas

Astor Clarke Ranked No. 1 City Bowler

By another unanimous vote Astor Clarke was ranked at the top of the District bowlers at the meeting of the Washington City Duckpin Association last night.

High average man with all-time record totals in the District, Rosslyn and Federal leagues, in addition to creditable sweepstakes performances, Clarke was ranked first for the fifth consecutive year.

The stipulation that bowlers must have competed in 125 league games left several potential high ranking pinmen ineligible, including Hokie Smith, Tony Santini, Ollie Pacini and Ed Blakeney.

Second to Clarke was his Rosslyn teammate, Perce Wolfe, who received a unanimous second place vote of 72 points. Paul Jarman, on the basis of high league averages was ranked third with the surprising total of 61 points.

Joe Harrison trailed in fourth place, with one third-place vote, five fourth and two fifth place votes. Pop Crawley Sweepstakes Champion Harry Hilliard was fifth with 47 points, seven ahead of Washington City singles and All-events Champion, Joe Freschi.

Fast-ball Bowlers Karl Gochenour and Lou Jenkins were ranked seventh and eighth while Ernie Hauser and Jack Talbert made the first ten for the first time, in ninth and tenth place, respectively. Howard Parsons and Joe Dimisa received 4 and 2 votes for honorable mention.

The voters included Perce Ellett, president of the association; Dave Burrows, vice president; A. L. Ebersole, secretary, and Ben McAlwee, Kenny Beck, Lonnie Krauss and Rod Thomas.

Cecil Travis Misses Cue on Squeeze Play

Shortstop Is Caught Asleep on Third as Griffs Have Chance To Tie Up Game

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Chicago, May 20.—The Nats went to great lengths to get themselves licked today, but it was not a total loss. They invented a new brain-teaser: How to avoid scoring the tying run in the ninth despite three singles and a sacrifice. The Nats answered that one, and the White Sox won the ball game, 5 to 4.

Sh-hh! Not so loud. You might arouse Cecil Travis from his deep slumber. When last seen Travis was dozing placidly on third base with the Nats needing one run to tie the score and George Case beating out a perfect bunt. The run that Travis didn't cross the plate with beat the Nats.

Case's hit was the third single the Nats had produced in the inning, which ought to deepen the mystery of the missing run. Big Clint Brown was entrusted with the job of holding Chicago's one-run lead after the Nats had battered John Rigney out in the eighth, and Travis opened the ninth with a single through the box.

Travis "Sleeps"

Very properly Jimmy Bloodworth sacrificed Travis to second. Rick Ferrell provided the second out with a line drive to Taft Wright, but Pinch-hitter Buddy Myer beat out a high bounder to third base and Travis moved to third. That's where he was when Case came to bat and that's where he remained, the (two words censored).

Case surprised Third Baseman Bob Kennedy by laying down a perfect bunt; alas, he surprised Travis, too. Case reached first ahead of Kennedy's throw and imagined that Travis had scored. But was he surprised? Travis, it seems, had missed Case's signal on the squeeze play; he hesitated and was lost. He took three steps toward the plate and returned to third. It was a complete squeeze play. Case put on the squeeze and Travis kissed the tying run goodby.

It was a sort of shame that the Nats lost the ball game. They rallied gallantly in the eighth inning to hammer Rigney out of the box in a four-run assault after he had held them to two hits in the first seven innings.

Hudson Is Loser

Yound Sidney Hudson was the losing pitcher and there is no dispute about that. The tall rookie right-hander pitched the White Sox to victory in the first two innings when he surrendered six hits and four runs when he was removed.

Joe Haynes, who succeeded Hudson, did a valiant job of it for five innings in an attempt to keep the Nats in the ball game. He gave the White Sox only three hits, and would have turned in a shut-out job save for a third-inning muff by Travis which gave the Sox their fifth and last run.

Hudson encountered grief at the outset. Kennedy beat out an infield hit and a bit later in the inning Kreevich singled, Wright drew a walk and Appling banged two runs home with a single to right. In the second, Rigney doubled to score him and Joe Kuhel delivered a single to score Rigney.

The White Sox collected their last run after Wright's third-inning

Springer Pitches One-Hitter as Maryland Triumphs, 4-1

G. W. Beaten In 5 Innings; Earl Fans 9

Maryland Closes Slate With Victory; Colonials Score Run On Walk, Wild Throw

By Jack Munhall

Setting down Colonial batters with a dispatch seemingly prompted by intuition that rain soon would curtail play, Lefty Earl Springer allowed George Washington only one harmless single yesterday as Maryland ended its baseball season with a 4-to1l five-inning victory at Griffith Stadium.

The rivals had completed the required number of innings to make the game official and Maryland was at bat with none out and one on in the first half of the sixth, when Umpire Jeffries scanned the rapidly darkening skies and decided it would be dangerous to continue. Subsequent heavy showers made further competition impossible, and thus Maryland finished a mediocre campaign with 11 victories and 9 defeats.

A Brilliant Season

For Springer, however, yesterday's impressive victory fashioned for three innings before the critical eye of Clark Griffith was the climax of a brilliant season. It was Springer's fifth victory, against one loss, his second one-hitter of the year and the occasion of some of his most effective pitching.

Nine of the 15 Colonials officially at bat fanned before Springer's baffling assortment of curves and drops and G. W.'s only solid blow was Wes Taylor's clean single to center in the third inning. The lone Colonial run, coming in the fourth, was unearned, spawning from a walk to Bob Gilham and a two-base wild throw by Maryland's shortstop, Wharton.

Meanwhile, the Terrapins had been making easy with the offerings of Jack Redinger, a tall righthander, to score once in the second, again in the fourth and 2 in the fifth. They combed the speedball offerings of the former Roosevelt High School star for seven hits, including consecutive lusty doubles in the second by Hugh Keller and Newton Cox, and further profited by three passes.

Keller Doubles

Redinger started auspiciously by striking out Fritz Maisel and Adam Begoechea and causing Wharton to raise an easy fly to center in the first. But Keller opened the second with the first of his two hits, a scorching two-bagger to center, and Cox followed with a double to about the same spot.

In the fourth the Terrapins put together a single by Dick McHale, his steals of second and third, and an error by First Baseman Taylor for another run. Taylor dropped a peg on Springer's grounder when the Maryland pitcher inadvertently jostled him.

Terrapin Steals Third in Cloud of Dust—but Definitely

Stealing bases in "a-cloud of dust" is a somewhat overworked term but nothing could more appropriately describe Adam Bengoechea's theft of third base in fifth inning of Maryland-George Washington game yesterday at Griffith Stadium. The Maryland second baseman later scored on Culver's single. The Terps won, 4-1, in a five-inning affair curtailed by rain

Cubs Defeat Dodgers, 6 to 4; Third in Row

Lee Blanks Brooklyn Until 6th When Phelps Homers With 2 Aboard

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 20.—The Dodgers absorbed their third straight defeat today, 6 to 4, from the Chicago Cubs, who kept up a more or less persistent barrage of 13 hits against four Brooklyn pitchers.

Bill Lee, in turn, shut out Brooklyn for the victory, although he was knocked out of the box in the sixth with a four-run onslaught that centered around Babe Phelps' homer with two on.

Hugh Casey started for the Dodgers and met his third defeat. In the second inning three consecutive singles and a force-out brought Chicago two runs and in the fourth a single, a walk and a single scored another, finishing Casey.

The Cubs collected two more in the sixth on a single by Billy Rogell, and successive doubles by Phil Cavaretta and Jim Gleeson. In the seventh Al Todd homered with the bases empty.

Chicago again had a makeshift infield, but played errorless ball.

Legion Nines Remain in Tie

Sergeant Jasper and Cooley-McCullough Post nines, of the Junior American Legion Baseball League, remained in a tie for first place when they turned back league opponents.

The Jaspermen swamped Potomac Post, 15-4, behind the four-hit pitching of Hill, and Cooley-McCullough beat Police by a 14-4 count. In the only other game of the day Costello Post staged a field day at the expense of National Cathedral, winning by 31-1 as Dean O'Donnell struck out 17 and issued but two hits.

Phils Rally in Ninth, Defeat Pirates, 8-7

Philadelphia Scores Seven to Register Third Straight Victory, Blasting Four Pittsburgh Hurlers

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 20.—The Phillies, putting on a dramatic ninth-inning rally today, erased a six-run deficit and hung up their second consecutive triumph over Pittsburgh, 8 to 7. It was the third straight victory for Philadelphia.

Four Pirate hurlers worked in the wild ninth, Mace Brown going out with a sore arm, Max Butcher and John Lanning being knocked out of the box and Dick Lanahan ending the game.

Manager Frankie Frisch, and Bob Elliott, of the Pirates, and Joe Marty, of the Phils, were banished from the park for disputing decisions.

The winning run came in on a walk after the Phillies had scored six times on seven hits and three bases on balls. With the bases

Four Athletic Homers Beat Browns, 8 to 4

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 20.—Four home runs in as many innings, plus a four-run outburst in the fifth without benefit of homers, gave the Philadelphia Athletics an 8-to-4 victory over the St. Louis Browns today.

The A's made only three hits in the first four innings but each was a home run. Bob Johnson clouted his seventh homer of the season in the second, Wally Moses got his fourth in the third and Frank Hayes hit his fourth in the fourth. In the eighth Hayes got No. 5.

Two walks by the Browns' lefthander, Emil Bildilli, were costly in the big fifth. They came after a single and a sacrifice, loading the bases and sending Bildilli to the showers. Vernon Kennedy relieved and was greeted by two singles which accounted for four runs.

The victory was Chubby Dean's fourth win of the season against one loss.

Danning Bats in Five Runs; Curt Davis Loses Third Straight

By the Associated Press

New York, May 20.—Cliff Melton, the Giants' veteran southpaw, who alternates between starting and bullpen assignments, shut out the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 0, on six hits today for his fourth victory against one defeat.

He had the full cooperation of his battery mate, Harry (The Horse) Danning, who batted in five of New York's runs with a home run and a triple. The other tally was a home run in the fifth inning by Mel Ott.

Danning's triple came with the bases loaded in the first inning to send New York off to a fast start, and he followed with his two-run homer in the third.

Own Homer Mark Mize's Aim in 1940

Card Slugger Wants To Maintain Annual Improvement at Bat

By the United Press

New York, May 20.—Johnny Mize has set a strange goal for himself this season—he only wants to beat his own home-run record.

"Everyone comes around asking me if I think I can beat Babe Ruth's home-run record," said the big Cardinal slugger before today's game between the Cards and Giants. "That's a laugh to me. All I'm trying to do is beat Mize's home-run record and I don't want to beat it by too much.

"Every year I've bettered my home-run record and I hope to keep up that pace. You see as a rookie I hit 19 homers. The next year I hit 25. Then in 1938 I hit 27 and last year it was 28. My mark this year is 29 because I don't want to make it too tough for myself in 1941."

But Mize can smash Ruth's homer mark of 60 made in 1927 if he keeps up his present pace. Ruth hit his twelfth homer in 1927 on May 28. Mize hit his twelfth yesterday (May 19).

The 230-pound St. Louis first baseman has even surprised himself by his fast start this season. He's hitting .333 and banging the ball better this spring than he ever has since he came to the majors.

"I believe my good start is largely due to the fact that I didn't bat against much minor league pitching," said Mize. "I left the club with a sore shoulder and knee and went to St. Louis and didn't face those bush league pitchers. Those games hurt you because usually you win by a big score and you don't half try."

Bees Rampant In 2 Innings, Beats Reds, 13-4

Lopez, Rowell Pace Attack With Homers; Errickson Is Winner

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 20.—The Boston Bees cavorted in two big innings today—a five-run third and a six-run fourth—as they coasted to a 13-to-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Aided by homers by Al Lopez and Carvell Rowell, each of whom hit with two men on base, Dick Errickson went the route, allowing 11 hits, but always tightening up when danger threatened.

Lopez' homer, on a first pitch from Junior Thompson, cleared the leftfield fence in the third inning, while Rowell's blow, on the initial toss of Red Barrett, who relieved John Hutchings, carried over the rightfield barrier in the fourth. Rowell also hit a single to drive in a total of four runs. It was his initial appearance since being forced out by an injury.

Sibby Sisti came to bat twice in the fourth, drawing a pass and hitting a single, while Buddy Hassett contributed to the attack with a triple and double. The Bees aided their defense with three double plays.

Star Illini Hurler Signed by Browns

Springfield, Ill., May 20 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns announced today the signing of John Pacotti, star pitcher of the University of Illinois, for their Springfield Three Eye League club.

Pacotti completed his college athletic career last week by pitching Illinois to victory over Indiana. He is expected to join the Springfield club after he receives his degree next month.

Sprained Ankle Puts Augie Galan on Bench

New York, May 20 (AP).—Augie Galan, of the Chicago Cubs, was kept out of the Cubs-Dodgers game today because of an ankle sprain. Galan, an outfielder who has been substituting in the infield, injured his ankle sliding into second base in the first inning of yesterday's game. He was out for batting practice today, however, after having the injury X-rayed.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald
Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

The stand-out performer among the Nats in their defeat at Chicago yesterday was Pitcher Joe Haynes and to him goes the chief award of points in the Man of the Month contest for the day.

To Haynes, seven points, because he stopped the White Sox cold in a relief role after they had scored four runs in the first two innings, and because he would have held them scoreless in his five-inning job except for an error.

To Johnny Welaj, five points, because he made two of the Nats hits, and because he drove in two runs with his eighth-inning single.

To Gerald Walker, four points, because he drove in two runs with his eighth-inning single and put the tying run on base.

To George Case, four points, because he delivered important hits in both the eighth and ninth.

Cox's Great Finish in Storm Wins Pro-Am Tournament

Congressional Star, Charley Malone Card 68; Cox, Partners Tied for 2d Place

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Wiffy Cox and his three amateur partners won four of seven prizes in the Invitation Pro-Amateur tournament yesterday at Indian Spring, but only after the Congressional pro came through with the season's greatest finish with the weather at its worst.

Playing through the afternoon storm with the wind and a driving rain in his face, streams running through the fairways and puddles on the greens, Cox finished 2-3 on the par 3-4 finishing holes to win the am-pro. Charley Malone, the 6 foot 4 Redskin end, was his partner. The pair had 67, five under par, while Cox's individual score was 70. Cox and Maury Fitzgerald tied for second with 68 and Cox and Charley Price finished fourth with 70. Cox's 70 was second to Lew Worsham's 31, 38—60 in the pro sweeps.

Goes Out in 36

Cox played the outgoing par 36 nine in regulation figures, before the rain. They started the back nine in a sprinkle, but before they completed the eleventh hole the downpour was on. Cox birdied the eleventh and twelfth, but three-putted the fourteenth. On the 525 par 5 sixteenth the wind and rain were blowing directly in his face, but he reached the green in three, 10 feet from the cup. Wiffy went for the putt and the ball slipped past and he missed, coming back for a six.

On the par 3 seventeenth he placed a great shot 12 feet from the pin and dropped the putt for a deuce, and on the eighteenth his second shot was 15 feet from the cup on the tough finishing hole, and he dropped the putt for a great birdie three.

Malone helped three shots for the 67, hitting the pin on the third hole with his second shot and the ball stopped close enough for him to drop a birdie putt. Fitzgerald came through with a birdie on the tenth and par on the eighth.

Houghton Has 68

Lewis Worsham, jr., Burning Tree pro, played in the morning under perfect conditions and posted a three-under par 69 that stood up for the pro sweepstakes prize. Worsham was out in 31, five under par, with three birdies, one where he holed a chip shot from off the green, and an eagle on the sixth. He started back with a six on the par for tenth and played the rest of the nine in par for a 38 and 69.

Riganti Takes Things Easy In Trial Spin

Argentine Driver Returns to Auto Races After 7-Year Lapse

By the Associated Press

Osvaldo Parmigiana, who is Riganti's relief pilot, followed his fellow countryman's "warm-up" spin by taking the yellow-and-blue creation on his driver's test.

Parmigiana passed the trial, required of drivers who have never driven in the May 30 500-mile classic and designed to test their ability to handle a car on the track.

A third driver to handle the Maserati was Cliff Bergere, Hollywood, Calif., movie stunt man, who pushed the machine to an unofficial speed of 145 miles an hour on the straightaways. Bergere qualified his own mount last Saturday.

Riganti, returning to the asphalt and brick course after an absence of seven years, has yet to attain a high speed on any of his practice runs, apparently trying to get the "feel" of the curves.

There was no indication from the Argentine's garage when Riganti would attempt to qualify his entry. Bergere said he understood that Riganti was awaiting a new fuel formula from New York before attempting to make the 10-mile run.

The Maserati, incidentally, received its number—29—today.

Called the "dog of the ages," no one can tell when he originated but he has been used for many centuries as a reindeer, shepherd, sled and watch dog by the peoples inhabiting that region of the extreme far north between the Yenesei River and the White Sea. As sledge dogs they are unbeatable, being able to draw one and a half times their own weight day after day. They are beautiful dogs, all white and about 22 inches at the shoulder, weighing about 40 pounds

The entry list of 1,167 is the sixth largest in history. The tournament proper will be held June 6-8, at the Canterbury Club near Cleveland.

(Thirty-three players from the District, Maryland and Virginia will compete for five places at Manor Club on Monday).

Players exempt inlude the 30 low scorers and ties for thirtieth plus the home club pro. Thirty-two were eligible for exemption this year, but Denny Shulte, loser in a playoff for the title last year, is out of competition because of a wrist operation.

Twenty-six qualifying sites originally were listed, but the rounds scheduled for San Francisco were canceled because there was only one entrant.

The entry list includes 808 professionals and 359 amateurs, the latter including two—Bud Ward and Wilford Wehrle—who were among the automatic qualifiers.

Pennsylvania led in the number of individual State entries with 181 players, who will compete at two sites for a total of 20 places. Ohio was next with 179 players vieing for 19 places, and Illinois ranked third with 150 competing for 17 places.

Jeffra Wins By Decision In Baltimore

trying to weave out of danger, but Harry wouldn't let him. Jeffra rushed in with a two handed barrage that sent Archibald half stumbling, half falling to the canvas again.

But the lad who's been branded as the most undeserving champion in all boxing history wouldn't stay down. He went to his corner, laughingly waved away anxious seconds and came back out to carry the fight briefly to Jeffra.

Champion Cut

Then the Baltimorean cut loose with a mad attack that drove Archibald all over the ring and cut the New York-Maryland "world champion" over the left eye.

Led by the cries of Maryland's Gov. O'Conor, Senator Radcliffe, Mayor Howard Jackson and Republican nominee for Senator, Harry W. Nice, the house came to its feet in a desperate plea for a knockout.

But Jeffra slowed down, Archibald took the next round and, appearing to gain strength as he went along, boxed the next two on even terms. He took the eighth and the ninth, but then he began to fade again under that punishing, chopping right hand Jeffra used so effectively all night.

Action Slows Down

Time after time Jeffra staggered the champion with that punch, and in the twelfth, Archibald began running blidly into Jeffra's outstretched left.

Midway of the fight, action slowed down to a near standstill and the crowd began hissing impatience. Referee Donovan took time out between rounds to crack: "Whaddaye want, a civil war?"

Jeffra stepped in the ring a 20-to-1 favorite to win the slightly tarnished crown Archibald has been wearing since the N. B. A. decleared he was no longer champion and rubbed Scalzo the "legitimate titleholder." Jeffra's victory leaves the door open for a Jeffra-Scalzo fight that would write a happy ending to an otherwise sad affair. Jeffra weighed 123½; Archibald, 122.

Buckeye Star Leads Golfers In Big 6 Play

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, May 20.—William (Billy) Gilbert, 6-foot Ohio State sophomore from Cincinnati, today carved out a neat 71, 74—145, 1 over par, to take an eight-stroke lead at the halfway mark in the 72-hole medal play Western Conference golf championship.

Heavy winds sweeping across the Ohio State layout sent scores soaring, but Gilbert snared eight birdies on his 36-hole jaunt to dominate the field.

In second place was R. Palmer, of Michigan, with 153. G. Modjeska, No. 5 man on the Illinois squad was third with 154, and J. Holmstrom, of Illinois, amateur champion of his State, was fourth with 156, a stroke ahead of Wisconsin's J. McMahon.

Illinois, with Alternate Modjeska outshooting the four regulars, took over the team leadership with 628 strokes, 6 ahead of Ohio State. Other team totals were Michigan, 636; Minnesota, 642; Wisconsin, 647; Northwestern, 650; Iowa, 659; Indiana, 666; Purdue, 672. Chicago entered but three men and did not compete in the team event.

California Hoists '41 Golfing Stakes To $26,000

By the Associated Press

Del Monte, Calif., May 20.—Pro golfers will have $26,000 to shoot for in 1941 California tournaments instead of the $18,000 available this year.

The raise was announced by Clifford L. Rawson, chairman of the California association of open tournament sponsors.

Rawson said the purse for the sixteenth annual Los Angeles Open, January 3-6, would be doubled to $10,000 and that Sacramento would hold a $3,000 Open tournament probably January 24-26.

The association voted to invite the U. S. Golf Association to hold the National Open in Los Angeles in 1942 or 1943.

Schedules adopted by the association follow:

January 3-6—Los Angeles Open, $10,000.
January 9-12 — Oakland Open, $5,000.

January 24-26—Sacramento Open, $3,000 (dates tentative).
February 1-2—Bing Crosby Pro-Amateur, Del Mar, $3,000 (this was a three-day tournament this year).

Garcia-Overlin Victor Gets Shot at Light-Heavy Crown

Mike Jacobs to Give Winner of Thursday's Bout Middleweight Chance at Other Title

By the United Press

Ceferino Garcia, Filipino "bolo" puncher, is favored at 12 to 5 to retain his claims to the middleweight crown against Ken Overlin, of Washington, D. C., at Madison Square arden.

Similarly, Billy Conn, the ring's master boxer, is favored to keep his light-heavy title in a return engagement with Gus Lesnevich, of New Jersey, at Detroit, June. 5.

If Garcia and Conn come through these tilts as expected, today's announcement would toss them into the ring for a big-gate "natural."

Today's development was unexpected because it had been unofficially understood that the Conn-Lesnevich winner would meet Heavyweight Bob Pastor this summer, paving the way for a possible title brawl with Joe Louis. It was likewise understood that Garcia's next important match would be a non-title affair at Chicago with Tony Zale, the hard-hitter who won an over-the-weight match against Seattle's Al Hostak in January.

Hostak shares the middleweight crown with Garcia. Hostak is recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association, while Garcia is 160-pound king in New York and affiliated States.

Meanwhile, Garcia—who attained peak condition sooner than expected—completed boxing preparations yesterday for Thursday night's bout with Overlin. It is unusual for a fighter to conclude boxing five days before an important engagement.

Overlin, who has had 173 professional bouts but who never went to a training camp before, was so chagrined at Garcia's action that he too hung up his gloves after today's sparring sessions.

Dulie Breaks Fast to Take Potomac Purse at Charles Town

Pays $12.20; Allen Caid Runs Second

Charming Herod, the Favorite, Wins Show In Photo Decision; May Fern Is Winner

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 20.—Dulie, a hard-running son of Dunlin, carried the colors of Owner and Trainer C. M. Feltner to victory today in the Potomac Purse, feature race of the wash-day program here. The 4-year-old gelding took command in the opening jumps and held seven others safe in a trip over the mile and a sixteenth course. Four lengths behind the Berryville (Va.) owned campaigner came W. Anderson's Allen Caid to be second. Charming Herod, the favorite because of his second in last Saturday's handicap, had to survive a photo to be third.

Dulie, in winning his fourth race of the year in 14 starts, was only lukewarm in the wagering and supplied a $12.20 mutuel to his backers. The track was fast despite a shower just before the opening of the program and Dulie was clocked in 1:46 3-5, creditable time. Bargain Boy, from No. 1 position, flashed in front for a few seconds as the field left the gate. Jockey Hernandez, however, hustled Dulie into the lead and the chase began. Passing the stands the first time, Dulie, Allen Caid and Charming Herod were showing the way with the latter far on the outside.

Bullet B. moved up to be closest to the pace on the backstretch. Allen Caid continued to be a factor, with Charming Herod still losing ground. Swinging for the stretch, Dulie drew up gradually. In the straightaway, Hernandez looked back, saw nothing coming, and eased up. Allen Caid continued gamely to be second, while Charming Herod and Bullet B. were a close fit for third.

E. A. Nicodemus' May Fern, a daughter of Mowlee, graduated from the maiden ranks in the first event. With Jockey Beverley Baker in the saddle, May Fern downed Danzig, Wash Stain and five others to pay a $5.80 mutuel.

Gay Prank, paying $12.40 and Congo Prince, bringing $4.80, were the winners in the second and third races. The daily double return on the pair was $2,820. Root hustled Gay Frank to the wire, while Palumbo piloted Congo Prince, a half-brother of Royal Business, to convincing victory.

GAY PRANK was off in the first flight, was hustled into the lead over PROSIT, ran head and head with the latter on the stretch and drew out when shaken up. PROSIT flashed forward soon after the start, raced on the outside of the leader, but could not keep up while put to pressure. GRAY GLEAM showed a good effort while racing evenly. ADRIATIC was hard ridden and had no excuses. MARSHALL A., first away, lacked speed to race with the leaders and was tired at the close. The others were outrun.

BULLET B., sluggish in the early stages, moved to contention with a bold rush and weakened through the stretch. PRINCE JOCK came through on the rail entering the stretch and could not threaten seriously. BRIGHT LIGHT was held safe. SOME GROUCHER raced wide. BARGAIN BOY was through early.

The latter was off slowly, worked his way to contention on the inside, saved ground entering the stretch and was in close quarters along the rail in the final test. HURDY GURDY rallied on the outside and closed willingly. COL. HATFIELD raced wide while improving his position and closed some ground. HAGERSTOWN BOY saved ground throughout. AMERICA FIRST failed to respond when placed to a drive. DISRUPT had early foot. MARBRAN stopped badly.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

If you want a task, try to catch up with Owner and Trainer John Bosley. He has upward of ten horses here and about a dozen jumpers at Pimlico. He conditions both sets despite the fact that they are 75 miles apart. Some days he makes two trips. Well, Clymene, the stable's Man o' War, was scratched yesterday when we tried to find a better spot. She is far down the list for today's seventh race, but she will be right there if put in action. The horse Buck Benny is ailing, but he probably will ride again soon. Willie (Over 21) Obert, the veteran jockey, reports that he is fit and ready to resume the riding wars. Before yesterday's program, the water wagon was doing its stuff between showers. Last Saturday's business here was tops. The betting was the highest on a week-end since the track was opened and some $14,000 ahead of last year. We were kidding Racing Secretary Freddie Burton about Royal Business getting beat here last Saturday. "Well, all I have to say is that Bimelech wasn't any rousing success, either," replied Burton. Here's a chance for a ball club in Washington or vicinity to sign a fine pitcher for Sunday games. Cecil McHugh, one of the starting gate crew here, can really slam that apple over the plate. He fanned 12 in a recent game with Berryville. If you want to see his stuff, he and his brother, Bob, will demonstrate any afternoon when the horses are on the backstretch. Jockey Joe O'Malley, one of the better riders, came into town yesterday and hopes to ply his trade here. Jockey Jackie Westrope has withdrawn his suit against West Coast officials who suspended him in California last winter. G. Ray Bryson, who has the Bel Air track, may gain control of the Syracuse (N. Y.) oval. Bryson was a visitor here. He is asociated with H. S. Horkheimer, whose horses are trained by J. Bowes Bond. All three are Baltimoreans. Bob Erickson, son of Henry Erickson, former jockey and now track superintendent here, is an apprentice rider and under a five-year contract to A. G. Vanderbilt. Jack Wade, of Fairmont, W. Va., has been added to the press box "up and at 'em" staff. Louis Feldman and Charlie Ulbig, custodians of the press boxes at Havre de Grace and Delaware Park, took in yesterday's sport. Toik is the right word. We have given Confucius back to the Chinamen.

BILL

First race—Betwick showed enough first out over this track to indicate that he will take down a purse in the near future. I believe this is the spot. Nay Nay ran a fine race here last week and will be right there. Millray is fit and belongs with this kind.

Second race — Timber Storm seems the best suited of those gathered for this event. Vesselli will do the booting and I see no reason for mistakes. Balkanese is good now and gets in light. Princess Lady is a money possibility.

Third race—So Fong gets in action here with 105 pounds and will do a lot of running. I'm going to string along. Wale Signal perhaps is the class of the field and deserves attention. Light weight should make Grouch a factor.

Fourth race—Dixie S gets in this with featherweight and will be in front early. I believe she can stick it out. Tobias is better than generally rated and could surprise. Lady Buck likes this route but may need racing.

Fifth race—Roman Boy has plenty of speed and will be making his first start of the season here. I believe he can carry the weight. Ravenhurst could be the second one if he stays in at turns. Little Harpist for the minor award.

Sixth race—Waugh Scout breaks off the rail for this event and appears capable of holding the opposition safe. Keswick Hill won in a somewhat similar field last week and is dangerous. Blind Talk for the minor award.

Seventh race—Clymene meets fillies and mares in this and gets my call. She is far down the list but I'm taking no chances this time. Charming Mary won on the milers and is a threat. Sedate for the show end.

Eighth race—Never Idol showed enough last out to suggest improvement in this. I'm going to take my chances. Counter Pass is better than that recent test. War Rumor is due to be a threat.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Chief Hollis, Canrock and Welsh Star.

Hudlin Will Face Chisox Today in Debut for Griffs

Chicago, May 20.—Willis Hudlin, late of the Cleveland Indians, will make his debut as a Washington pitcher tomorrow when the Nats meet the White Sox in the third game of the current series.

As his opponent, Hudlin has drawn the White Sox's prize pitcher. He is Jack Knott, a right-handed fugitive from the Browns, who has had sensational success with Chicago. In his last game, Knott held the Tigers to two hits and won a 1-0 game in a duel with Tommy Bridges, who also allowed only two hits.

Mioland Hurt, Is Retired For Season

Howard Star Injured After Bolting During Workout at Pimlico

By the United Press

New York, May 20.—Charles S. Howard announced today that his 3-year-old Mioland had been injured after bolting during a workout at Pimlico and would be out of action forthe remainder of the season. Mioland ran second to Bimelech in the Preakness in his last race.

The San Francisco automobile dealer made his announcement at Belmont Park. He said the horse had run away during a workout at the Maryland course on Saturday, thrown his exercise boy and stumbled on a concrete walk. Howard did not say how serious the injuries were, but added that "Mioland was pretty badly hurt and will not be able to race again this year."

Mioland is a son of the imported German stallion, Mio D'Arezzo. He was bred at Hillsboro, Oreg., by H. W. Ray and purchased by Howard during the winter at Santa Anita Park for $15,000. Since then he has won the San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita, run fourth to Gallahadion in the Kentucky Derby and second in the Preakness.

U. S. to Meet Post-War Need, Heimann Says

Special Dispatch to The Post

Toronto, May 20.—A prediction that the United States will not shirk its responsibility in the restoration of a prosperous, post-war world economic setup was made this afternoon by Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the American National Association of Credit Men at the First International Credit Congress here at the Royal York Hotel before 1,500 Canadian and American credit executives.

The credit congress also heard an address on "World Commerce vs. World War," by the venerable Archdeacon A. P. Gower-Rees, of Montreal, at its morning session today. Following Mr. Heimann, James S. Carson, vice president of the American & Foreign Power Corporation of New York, spoke on "Western Hemisphere Commercial Arbitration and World Economic Readjustment." The credit congress is jointly sponsored by the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association, Ltd., and the National Association of Credit Men and will continue through Thursday.

Gold and Credit

Discussing America's role after the end of the European war, Heimann declared that "in the hills of Kentucky there lie buried approximately 20 billions of gold. The potential influence of this credit is almost beyond mental comprehension.

"We know that when the world becomes stabilized, or when definite moves are mede in that direction, we shall not selfishly, like a miser, hoard the gold. We shall, however, be vigilant to protect it against any unsound uses and we shall demand a program that will insure its working to create new credit."

Turning to an analysis of credit and its function in domestic and world economics, Heimann stated that "because the word credit, itself, bespeaks confidence and understanding, every credit transaction, whether it involves a cent or a billion dollars, is direct evidence of the trust human beings repose in one another.

Foreign Trade and Credit

"Each credit transaction stands as a symbol of man's confidence in man. The implications of credit constitute a direct challenge to the doctrine that might makes right.

"Your country and mine are facing an opportunity to further expand our trade with other nations. Once peace is again restored to the peoples of the world, if we are to be successful in the maintenance of that peace, through the expansion of world trade, we must realize that all our credit, all our media of exchange are basically barter.

"They are advanced methods, it is true, but they are barter nevertheless. This means that if our credit or medium of exchange is to be sound, we must, in our international commercial relations, recognize the necessity for mutual gain, the vital need for reciprocity.

"Because credit is such a potential influence, it is essential that every care be taken to see that it is properly handled. It can be as dangerous as dynamite when entrusted to careless or unskilled hands, as constructive as industry itself when properly used.

"Analyze some of the world's present ills and we find a conflict with what we, who are credit executives, believe to be sound principles of credit. We note a lack of cooperation, a disinterest in joining hands in the widespread effort to promote the general welfare.

"Cash and Carry" Budget

"As credit is the measure of the strength of business, so is it the gauge of a nation's strength. And consequently it is clear that the greatest need of the United States today is a constructive program based on sound credit.

"We in the United States need a 'cash-and-carry' plan for our own Government financing. Upon a foundation of sound credit, constructed by previous generations, we have built a shaky superstructure that can hardly have the full and desired strength to resist the winds of adversity."

Steel Output Advanced to Meet Trade Increase

By the Associated Press

New York, May 20.—The country's steel operations are estimated for this week at 73 per cent of capacity, the highest since the week of January 29, this year, and an increase of 3 points over the previous week, the American Iron and Steel Institute announced today.

The current level compares with 60 per cent a month ago and 48.5 per cent a year ago.

In the last several weeks, aitivity in the industry has broadened at a pace comparable with the upturn of last autumn, although present operations are still far below the 94.4 per cent mark, recorded last November.

Heavily increased demand for export steel is credited as a major factor in the outpot upturn.

General Advance in Commodities Greets Allied Stiffening; Stocks Edge Upward In Moderate Trading; Bond Tone Improves

New York, May 20.—A general recovery in the commodity futures market, a modest recovery in stocks in relatively light trading, a firm market for United States Government bonds and a rebound in those European currencies which had been under pressure since Germany launched the invasion of Belgium and France characterized the financial world today.

The New York Stock Exchange had a better tone from the opening, being aided along with other markets by evidence of greater Allied resistance to the thrusts of the invaders. Morning gains were not completely held and it was noticeable that there was no runaway market on the upside, the street being in a cautious frame of mind.

Only 1,237,780 shares changed hands, the smallest volume since the present invasion started. The composite average showed a net advance of 0.24 point, with steels, equipments, metals and rails turning in the best performance. Aviations and other war securities were favored during the early part of today's rebound but they had more difficulty late in the session and many closed moderately lower.

Hysteria Is Lacking

Greater satisfaction came from the recovery of commodity futures. The trend was upward from the beginning. Buying reflected some relief over the progress of resistance being shown the German army. Cotton futures and other commodities kept pace.

In all markets there was a noticeable lack of the hysteria which characterized last week's trading. It was appreciated that the United States is not going to be invaded now and that we have time to arm. It was also realized that we are now on the road to complete preparedness.

The recovery tendency was particularly noticeable in the foreign exchange market. Sterling was bid up 6¾ cents to $3.28¼, compared with its record low of $3 on May 10. It was based in part on rumors that the British treasury might soon discontinue its policy of leaving the free sterling market alone.

In trading on the big board the aviations claimed a large share of the tape. Curtiss Wright again was the most active and added a small fraction. It was followed by Lockheed, off ⅝, and most of the aeronauticals closed moderately lower. General Motors was up nearly a point and good gains were turned in by American Smelting, Johns Manville, Peoples Gas, Public Service of New Jersey and Woolworth. United Aircraft and Westinghouse were among the leaders to lose more than a point.

Better Tone in Bonds

Listed bond trading today disclosed a better tone than prevailed last week. Small gains appeared in Treasury bonds and most foreign government issues also were better. Domestic bonds of the speculative classification remained irregular, but the more active bonds advanced slightly. Trading totaled $6,350,000.

French bonds were 2 to 5 points down in the foreign section, but demand was good for German, Norwegian, Danish and Belgian securities. Australian and Canadian loans held around former levels. Italian 7s were up, and southeastern European bonds likewise did better. The Latin-American group advanced under the leadership of Argentines.

Some of the medium priced rails again reflected worried selling, however, and the inactive bonds that were traded for the first time in some days showed heavy losses.

U. S. Business Seeks Markets In Latin America

Pittsburgh, May 20 (AP).—Edwin F. Chinlund, president of Postal Telegraph, said today an increase in telegraphic communication between the United States and South America showed the business men of this country were trying to capture new markets to replace ones lost in Europe.

Here on an inspection tour, Chinlund said his company was handling 25 per cent more cable traffic than normally and added:

"Censorship restrictions against the use of code in cable messages is increasing the wordages and has tended to raise our revenue. In addition to the heavier volume of foreign traffic, we must also deal with sudden and extreme fluctuations in the day-to-day transmission of intelligence."

The recent $5,000,000 loan granted Postal by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, he said, will enable the firm to "consolidate and strengthen" its position."

Reich Issues Credit Money In Seized Areas

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 20.—Germany raised a 3,000,000,000-mark credit today to finance her armies in the newest occupied territories, authorized sources announced. (The value of the mark nominally is 40 cents.)

As in Poland, Norway and Denmark, the Reich introduced dual currency in the form of so-called Reich credit bank notes in Luxembourg, Belgium, Holland and German-held parts of France.

The rate of exchange for credit bank notes, it was announced, has been fixed on the basis of current quotations at 1.50 Dutch guilders for one mark, the Belgian and Luxembourg francs at 10 pfennigs and the French franc at 5 pfennigs.

Currency Good in Reich

New York, May 20 (AP).—Foreign exchange experts commented today that a 3,000,000,000-mark credit established by Germany for her armies in newly occupied countries permitted "payment" for goods in currency worthless outside the Reich.

The experts said the terms of the German order indicated that the 3,000,000,000 marks were especially printed for distribution in Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Belgium and France and that they could have little or no backing in gold.

These sources said it was believed in Wall Street that $60,000,000 to $80,000,000 in gold was held in the Netherlands treasury but was removed before the German conquest. Poland's treasury gold also was removed before the Germans captured Warsaw. Virtually the only gold captured by Germany, said the experts, was an indeterminate amount rumored to be about $80,000,000 worth taken from Czecho-Slovakia early last year.

Federal Reserve Reports Increase In Total Loans

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans turned upward again last week after three weeks of declining credits in this field.

In 101 cities, banks increased their business loans by $10,000,000, to a total of $4,414,000,000. These loans have increased in most of the weeks since last fall, and the total for 101 cities was $596,000,000 higher on May 15 than it was a year ago.

Banks in the Chicago district alone increased such loans $12,000,000. Elsewhere, there were small increases and decreases, making the net change for 101 cities, $10,000,000.

New York, May 20 (AP).—Public offering of $60,000,000 Texas Corp., 2¾ per cent bonds, originally scheduled for next Wednesday, has been temporarily deferred, it was announced today.

Postponement of the financing for the big oil company, it was understood in Wall Street investment circles, was due to war unsettlement of financial markets.

Pierre du Pont Yields Place With Company

Lammot duPont Quits As President to Make Way for Younger Man

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., May 20.—Pierre S. duPont retired as chairman of the board, and Lammot duPont resigned as president of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. today at a session of the company's board of directors.

Lammot duPont immediately was elected board chairman. Walter S. Carpenter, jr., a vice president, was elevated to the company presidency.

A company statement said that Lammont duPont had terminated his services as president because he had reached an age when he realized a younger man must soon succed him and because he wished more leisure than the duties of the office allowed him.

Committee Is Reduced

He also retired as chairman of the board's executive committee, being succeeded by Carpenter. The committee itself was reduced from nine to eight, Carpenter's place not being filled.

In a further change, Irenee duPont, a former company president, resigned as vice chairman of the board of directors. The position was left unfilled for the present. He and Pierre will continue as members of the board.

Angus B. Echols, a vice president, became chairman of the finance committee, a position formerly held by Carpenter. J. B. Eliason, company treasurer, was elected a vice president and a director. All changes became effective immediately.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Lammont duPont issued this statement:

In Keeping With Policy

"The action taken by the board today is indicative of the company's time-honored philosophy of management. It will be observed that those retiring from active positions are men who have reached an age where retirement is not only normal but frequently incidental to desire from relief from responsibilities.

"It will be observed, likewise, that those elected to fill the vacated positions are younger men in years but long in training and the service of the company. The vigor of the duPont company's management always has been premised upon its principal executives being men comparatively young but with long experience with the company.

"The new president, Walter S. Carpenter, jr., typifies the policy here mentioned. A man in the prime of managerial life, of proven ability and extraordinary energy, he is selected from the many of long experience and training."

Cotton Surges 27 to 37 Points As Selling Wanes

New York, May 20 (AP).—Cotton futures rushed up 27 to 37 points today in a decisive reversal of last week's violent decline. Dealers mentioned several reasons for the rally:

Establishment of minimum prices for wheat at Chicago and subsequent sharp improvement in the grain; three-day suspension of cotton trade at Liverpool; belief held by many traders there will be a new cotton loan.

Cottonseed oil futures jumped 21@29 points today, well out of reach of the lowest prices of the season hit in last week's severe setback. Sales totaled 186 lots: July, 6.51; September, 6.60; October, 6.60 bid; December, 6.65 bid. Crude oil was priced nominally at 5¼@5½ a pound in the Southeast and Valley and 5 cents in Texas.

Foreign Markets

London, May 20 (AP).—Security prices were trimmed sharply today following a bearish interpretation of week-end war news. While closing prices were in many cases a little above the day's worst, business remained mainly a matter of individual negotiation. British government bonds at one time hit the minimum levels established some weeks ago. Domestic rails were particularly weak. Industrials and commodity stocks were uniformly depressed. In the foreign bond market India issues declined, along with municipal and colonial loans.

Paris—The bourse overcame opening weakness today and closed with a firmer trend. Effect of "grave" war news was offset by appointment of Weygand as chief of all military operations, which promised new energy directed against the German drive. Mediterranean stocks advanced but domestic equities continued irregular. Ordinary rentes improved, although the 1937 dollar guaranteed issues dropped 425 centimes.

Liverpool—Cotton market closed until Thursday.

New York, May 20 (AP).—"Free" sterling rose more than 5 cents and the Canadian dollar ⅝ of a cent in the foreign exchange market today.

Strength in the empire currencies seemed an outgrowth of the belief Allied forces are showing more resistance to the Nazi drive. Dealings remained small, however, while operators waited for clearer news from abroad.

Boston, May 20 (AP) (U. S. D. A.).—Manufacturers and top makers were doing practically nothing on raw wool on the Boston market today. Asking prices on wools held in Boston were unchanged compared with the close of last week. Country dealers in fleece wool producing areas, however, were wiring East for bids on their accumulations of three-eighth and 17-4534 blood bright fleeces, and some were offering to sell at prices slightly lower than prices asked last week. The unfilled portions of a number of mill orders for three-eighths and quarter blood fleeces have been cancelled because of the existing uncertainty in the market.

Wheat Rallies Up to 8 Cents In Buying Rush

Chicago, May 20.—With the past week's collapse of grain prices ended by a special exchange order forbidding trades at lower than Saturday's close, the wheat market today staged a strong recovery as gains ranged up to almost 8 cents. Other cereals also were higher.

Greatly expanded flour business, encouraged by the fixing of minimum prices for wheat, brought large milling orders into the pit. Another move to bolster prices, announcement of the new Government wheat loan, also attracted attention but some traders said the loan price averaging around 64 cents, or about a cent higher than a year ago, was lower than had been expected.

Wheat's higher trend, which was the only direction it could go, began at the opening bell. Quotations were 3 to 6 cents net higher in first trades and at no time during the session did the market get nearer than 3 cents to the minimums.

Wheat later reacted but closed 4¾-6½ higher than Saturday, May 85¼, July 83¾-84. Corn closed 3⅝-4 cents higher, May 63½, July 62¾; oats 1⅜-2 up; rye 4¼-4¾ higher; soy beans 1½-3¼ higher and lard 15-25 higher.

War Demand Is Expected To Boom Cars

Auto Industry Gets Ready to Produce Weapons for Defense

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 20.—Despite the substantial business of the past year, there is plenty of "spare plant capacity" throughout the automobile intustry that may shortly be taken up by war preparedness business, says Ward's Automotive Reports in its current issue.

"The era of 'educational' orders is obviously near its end," the trade publication says; "the second phose is upon us, wherein the lessons of 'educational' business will be put to work.

Appraising war purchases in the motor industry's plants, the survey adds:

"A concentration of small-gun and machine-gun manufacture appears to be developing at Saginaw, where 'educational' orders for Browning machine guns have been placed with a General Motors division. At Detroit there are reliable reports that the former Dodge truck plant, a war-manufacturing center in 1917-1918, may shortly be reconditioned for shell optut.

Rubber Possibilities

Discussing the European war and its possible effect upon the rubber industry, Ward's says:

"No particular concern over inventories is expressed by rubber company officials despite the spread of the war to The Netherlands and development of fears that our crude supplies from the Dutch East Indies may be impaired.

"Immediate supplies of crude on hand in this country total 162,282 long tons, according to the R. M. A. estimate as of April. Rubber afloat is 102,557 long tons . . . a five-month supply on hand and en route . . . additionally, the reclaiming of rubber continues higher than in previous years. . . . Too, there is a high quantity of completed tires in the country to add to our immediate supply of rubber in all processes of production."

Fears Held Unnecessary

(The head of one of the country's leading rubber companies said in an interview here last week that there was no ground for apprehension concerning crude rubber supplies from the East Indies because of the war. "Whoever controls them still will have to sell the rubber output," he said, "and we will contiuue to be buyers.")

Ward's says that some cause for concern has developed recently over used-car conditions in the motor industry. "The sudden spread of new-car purchasing during the first 10 days of May," it says, "brought with it an attendant increase in used-car turnins, thus aggravating problems which up to now have been bothersome, but not severe."

Nats Fumble Squeeze Play, Lose, 5 to 4

Score Four Runs in Eight But Miss Out In 9th; Travis Sleeps

grounder was muffed by Travis. The pesky Appling singled again and Rosenthal delivered a long fly that that fetched the run home from third.

The Nats were a pueril outfit for seven innings. They didn't make a hit until the fifth, when Travis singled. The only man to reach base in that interim was Rick Ferrell, who walked in the third and was promptly snuffed out by a double play started and finished by Kuhel, who grabbed Pinch Hitter Jake Early's hot liner.

Suddenly in the eighth, the Nats restored themselves to the ball game with a four-hit, four-run assault. Appling inspired the uprising by muffing Bloodworth's grounder, and Ferrell produced a single to left. Sammy West pinch-hit for Haynes and Rosenthal rescued Rigney at this point by galloping against the leftfield wall for West's long drive. Case filled the bases with a short single to center, but Lewis popped up. Welaj didn't. He singled to center, sending two runs home. Welaj went to second on the throw from the outfield, and Gee Walker walloped a single to left that fetched the third and fourth runs of the inning and put the tying run on first.

Krauser-Martinelli Winner to Meet Bruns Outdoors

The winner of Thursday night's mat bout between Karol Krauser and Gino Martinelli will meet Bobby Bruns in the first outdoor show of the season, Promoter Joe Turner announced yesterday. Bruns is recognized as world's champion in 12 States.

Krauser and Martinelli battled to a 60-minute draw last week in a return of "scientific" wrestling. Bruns used the same tactics in a recent title bout here with Carol Zbyszko.

Two former football players, 240-pound Benny Rosen of New York and 260-pound Felix Slovikowski, California, are in a supporting bout to Thursday's card. Juan Olaguivel and Lou Farino meet in another preliminary.

Gus Dorazio- Boyd Winner to Meet Conn

Pittsburgh, May 20 (AP).—Johnny Ray, manager of Light Heavyweight Champion Billy Conn, announced tonight he had signed a contract for Conn to fight the winner of the Gus Dorazio-Bill Boyd heavyweight battle tomorrow night.

He said he had signed with Art Rooney and Barney McGinley, Pittsburgh promoters, for a non-title bout to be held sometime late in June or early July at Forbes Field here. Conn will meet Gus Lesnevich in a title fight at Detroit June 5.

McIntyre Wins

New York, May 20 (AP).—Bobby McIntyre, 140, of Detroit, gained a technical knockout verdict over Jimmy Fantini, 138¾, of New York, in 43 seconds of the fifth of the main eight-round bout at the Coliseum tonight.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing—

Just as we believed would be the case, the hot spots over the week-end were Benedict and Solomons. In fact, hard-heads were taken in goodly numbers from one end of the Patuxent River to the other.

ACKERMAN

We saw Ernie Lee on his new twin diesel cruiser Sarah Jane pull in late Saturday from a trip down to the Honga River. With him was Maurice Fitzgerald. There fishing was sporadic but well worthwhile, although the trip as a whole was more in the nature of a shakedown cruise.

Other boats coming in at Deale from fishing the Choptank River had good catches, but those fishing out in front counted themselves lucky if they had as many as a dozen.

Eastern Air's Bill Briggs led a party down to Benedict, and it looks like everyone caught croakers but Bill. Burtz Henley had 14; Wirt Scruggs, 13; Walter Swan, 9; Arthur Jackley, 6; Don Duff, 6; and two for Bill. He says he caught one on the off side of the boat that no one saw, but in that crew you've got to see them to count them.

Edward R. Marsh's party, also at Benedict, had between 40 and 50, while Howard Bailey's party acounted for close to 60. The 120, taken by Joe Knott and his party of five, was top boat so far as we know. Twenty to the angler is pretty fair fishing anytime.

One two-pound trout was caught by Ray Thomas—not a good percentage considering there were more than 150 boats out, but exceptional nevertheless, because it is still early. They haven't even got going good at Peconic yet, and that is the criterion by which all trout fishing is gauged. So far as we know this is the first trout fish of the season in the upper bay section.

Capt. Tobe Shorter is building two more power boats to add to his already considerable fleet. But why not? This is one of the closest fishing places to Washington and at times productive of exceptional fishing.

Milton Gordon fished with Ernie and Bill Lee on Sunday, from Holland Point to Diamond Shoals and back, and the fishing just wasn't what it should have been. This was easily accounted for, however—that stiff breeze turned the whole bay into a smother of foam.

Milton, for those of his many friends who might not know, has finally settled down at Charlie Rosenthal's new Sport Center at Tenth and E streets in charge of fishing tackle. We hope he stays there.

In spite of the stiff breeze that was blowing offshore, many of the Ocean City boats were out. Capt. Ches Gray on the Hilda had the best catch—17 mackerel.

The Cards used three pitchers, with Curt Davis, their starter, getting charged with his third loss of the season. A 20-game winner last year, he hasn't come through yet this spring.

We noted several weeks ago that Ches had gone private—skippering a private cruiser. He has, however, gone back to chartering at the Magee Basin, for which we are glad. He is too good a man to go out of circulation.

The run of sea bass is on at Ocean City, if we may judge by the catches of the past several days. And the run of porgies and weaks can't be far behind.

Collegiate Hockey Program Curtailed

Toronto, May 20 (AP).—Warren Stevens, president of the international Intercollegiate Hockey League, announced today he had received formal notification that the four United States members—Harvard, Princeton, Yale and Dartmouth—would be unable to carry out the schedule arranged for next season.

Necessity of effecting economies in their athletic budgets was given as the reason for the action. Withdrawal of the four colleges leaves the Canadian universities—Toronto, Queen's, Montreal and McGill—to play in the Canadian Intercollegiate Hockey League. Toronto won the International League title last season.

Montreal Royals Sign Gus Suhr, Former Phil

Montreal, May 20 (AP).—Gus Suhr, veteran National League first baseman, has been signed by the Montreal Royals and will join the International League Club almost immediately, it was announced tonight.

Suhr was signed as a free agent after being given his outright release by the Philadelphia Phillies. Before he was waived to the Phillies last July Suhr played nine full seasons with the Pittsburgh Pirates, for many years was their captain, and set the league record for endurance by playing in 822 consecutive games.

Tribute Paid Justices Butler And Holmes

Hughes, Jackson Laud Conservative; Walsh Praises Famed Liberal

Tribute was paid yesterday to the memory of two deceased members of the Supreme Court who as colleagues on the bench represented opposite poles of judicial thinking.

Justice Pierce Butler, staunch conservative, was warmly lauded both by Chief Justice Hughes and by New Deal Attorney General Robert Jackson, who presented resolutions adopted by the Supreme Court bar after Butler's death last November.

And the memory of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, famous liberal, was recalled when Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, presented a bill providing for publication of a volume of Holmes' writings and for creation of an Oliver Wendell Holmes Memorial Garden in the block immediately behind the Supreme Court Building.

Sincerity of Great Character

Addressing the Supreme Court before a silent audience that jammed the courtroom, Attorney General Jackson declared that Justice Butler "was too earnest and forthright to wish me—even on such an occasion—to deny or minimize the conflict . . between the general philosophy I have advocated here and much of that to which he was so consistently devoted.

"But across that gulf, which always exists between two men who regard each other as representing ominous trends, I felt the strength, the warmth and the sincerity of a great character—one of the most firm and steady men I have known."

Jackson recalled that when he argued cases before the court, he often "feared" Butler's questions "more than the argument of my adversary." The Attorney General added that "among the public men of my time, I have known no one of more affirmative and immovable and masterful character than Mr. Justice Butler."

The Chief Justice declared that Justice Butler, "an eminent advocate and judge," believed in the conception of property rights "as holding a better promise of social progress than Governmental plans involving restriction of individual initiative."

Chief Justice Hughes declared that his former associate "sought to keep open the traditional path to individual achievement which he himself had trod."

Memorial Volume

In the bill introduced yesterday by Senator Walsh, provision is made for the sale of Justice Holmes' old home at 1720 I street northwest, around which controversy has raged almost since the jurist's death in 1935.

The Holmes memorial volume, "to make readily available to the public the best expression of his thought," is expected to be coupled by Justice Felix Frankfurter, often considered Holmes' spiritual descendant on the court.

The Holmes memorial garden, "to perpetuate the memory of Justice Holmes and to commemorate the love of beauty and of the quiet open spaces of Washington to which he often gave expression," is to be designed from plans selected through public competition. Funds for this garden—except for the land—and for the memorial volume are to come from the monetary bequest of $265,000 which Justice Holmes left to the United States.

Fund Drive Of Symphony Falling Short

With only two days left in which to raise the quota of $107,600, five of the nine committee chairmen of the National Symphony Orchestra's tenth annual sustaining fund campaign yesterday expressed anxiety over the outcome of the drive and the orchestra's future.

If the orchestra is to continue next season, $107,600 must be raised by noon tomorrow. The last report on the campaign last Thursday said $76,822.46 had been contributed, leaving almost $31,000 yet to be obtained before the summer concerts on the 1940-41 season are definitely assured.

Alarmed by the reports of the majority of his committee chairmen, A. F. E. Horn, general campaign chairman, made a general appeal to the people of Washington to contribute during the short time remaining.

"Although this campaign has been carried on with great enthusiasm," Mr. Horn said last night, "I can see no assurance that the full goal will be reached by Wednesday.

"Naturally, I hope that the drive will be a success, but the fact remains that we still need several thousand more dollars before continuation of the National Symphony is assured.

"We need the help of everyone in Washington at this critical time. We need small gifts, and we need large gifts if the symphony is not to pass out of existence Wednesday. That would be an unthinkable tragedy, but it will happen if everyone does not contribute what he can during the next 48 hours."

The five committee chairmen who expressed themselves as doubtful if the goal would be reached by tomorrow noon were Thomas P. Morgan, jr., cochairman with Mrs. Milton W. King of the special gifts committee; John Rowland Hill, chairman of the business and professional committee; Mrs. Barton K. Yount, chairman of the Army committee; Edward J. Noble, chairman of the Government committee; Mrs. Charles Bittinger, cochairman with Mrs. Foster Adams of the Orchestra Guild.

More optimistic were the heads of the four other committees. Mrs. Reeve Lewis, cochairman with Mrs. Eugene Byrnes of the associations committee; Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, chairman of the education committee; Mrs. Alfred Johnson, vice chairman of the Navy committee and speaking for Mrs. Emory Scott Land, chairman; Mrs. Robert Le Fevre, cochairman with Mrs. Edwin B. Parker of the suburban committee.

500 Hungarians, Spanish Ordered to Quit Egypt

Alexandria, Egypt, May 20 (AP).—Nearly 500 Hungarian and Spanish dancers today were ordered to leave Egypt as the government and British authorities intensified their counter-espionage drive.

The government decided the dancers learned too much while entertaining Allied soldiers and sailors.

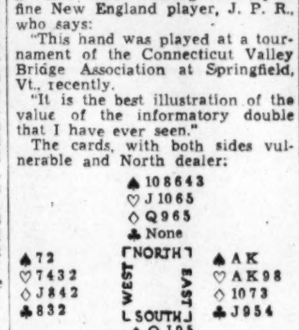
Contract Bridge

The New England tournament has never been easy for the New York experts, who last year, in spite of a formidable entry, did not distinguish themselves except in the team-of-four match. Throughout the year, in all parts of New England, crack players are training for the New London meet. Here is a hand about bidding sent by a fine New England player, J. P. R., who says:

"This hand was played at a tournament of the Connecticut Valley Bridge Association at Springfield, Vt., recently.

"It is the best illustration of the value of the informatory double that I have ever seen."

The cards, with both sides vulnerable and North dealer:



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♡	Dbl	Pass
1 ♠	2 ♡	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dbl	Pass	Pass
Pass

"Only by the informatory double can North-South get into a game-going contract," says J. P. R.

"There is, of course, nothing to the play. Only 3 pairs out of 18 played the hand at four spades. Most Souths succumbed to the obvious temptation to bid clubs."

Listen! with Slocum

In my rather painful position of press agent I was alternately in great pain and great happiness the other evening when WJSV picked up Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's address on "The Air Defense of America." The colonel's deep aversion to publicity left an aching void in my heart that will never quite be filled, because newsreels, press associations, photo services and just about every publicity outlet in the world was just dying to get the colonel's picture and with it certain pieces of equipment that would bring to mind the Columbia Broadcasting System and WJSV.

In the comparative privacy of the broadcasting studio the colonel was downright jolly, although he is not what you'd call an Arthur Godfrey at that microphone. He doesn't suffer from mike fright, but his natural shyness is pretty apparent when he is on the air.

In the first place he's a shadow boxing speaker. He shuffles his feet back and forth as he talks, much in the manner of a pug going through a gym workout. He prefers to stand when he talks, but he'll do just about anything he is asked to do. He has a quaint theory, not always shared by some important gentlemen, that people working in radio know more about the technique of broadcasting than he does.

In his first speech from Washington several months ago all the networks picked up his talk and the hotel room he spoke from was loaded with equipment. This fascinated him and he asked the engineers countless questions about their stuff. The other evening there was but one piece of equipment and one engineer, Bob Pilcher. He obviously knows the technical aspects of radio transmission extremely well, because he asked Bob several professional questions after his talk.

Orphans in Love

By Marion White

Abruptly, Rosalind faced Ellen. "Would you like a job with me?" "Oh, yes!" Ellen's eyes widned to their full extent. "I'd love it, even if it were only basting seams."

SYNOPSIS

Ellen Carlan has loved Peter Storm since both were children. Peter refuses to declare his love fearing they would be impoverished should they marry. While picnicking a storm causes them to take refuge in the old Tucker house. In a picture they see a man with a face so similar to Peter's that Ellen mistakes it for Peter's picture. In a book they learn the man is Tucker, a Revolutionary War hero. Peter states the house is a challenge and he will never be content with less. Peter wanders through a tenement district when a building bursts into flames. Three little boys are trapped. Peter, rushes to their rescue. The newspaper reporters swarm Peter's hospital and one representative, Carver of the Press, is admitted to Peter's room for an interview. Peter explains that he acted as Tucker would have done and asks Carver to inform Ellen. Ellen talks freely of Peter and the old Tucker house. In another section prominent John Abbott reads of Peter Storm's linking with the Tucker family, and fears his deception 25 years ago will be revealed. Cora, his wife, suggests he make friends with Peter. Peter accepts a position as junior law clerk in Abbott's office, and Millicent Abbott introduces herself to him. He is dazzled. Peter tells Ellen that Millicent is the most beautiful girl he has ever seen and that she has invited him to dinner. Ellen is secretly hurt at this revelation. During her weekly visit to the orphanage. Ellen weeps and explains to Mother Rosa Peter's interest in Millicent Ambott. Mother Rosa gives Ellen a letter of introduction to Rosalind, a famous fashion designer.

Chapter 15

"MOTHER ROSA thought I'd be happier in an office."

"You wanted to sew, then?"

"Oh, yes. I've always loved to sew. But she thought it was . . . well, too much drudgery, she said."

"It is. Make no mistake about that."

"So is stenography," Ellen assured her quickly. "But if one can have a choice between drudgery which is enjoyable and drudgery which is tiresome——"

"Exactly, my dear. No work is more arduous than work which we dislike. And none is more pleasant than that which brings us some personal gratification. My aunt, it would seem, made a mistake common to many mothers.

Honest Work

"They try to spare their daughters, particularly, the natural obligation to honest work. They mean well, but their own good intentions rob such children of the greatest fulfillment life can offer them, the reward for work well done . . . Well, no matter. Tell me, Ellen, just how much sewing have you done?"

"Children's things, for the most part. Rompers for the little girls at St. Peter's.

She Is Proud

"And . . ." she sat up proudly in the brown ensemble . . . "my own things, of course."

Rosalind looked her over critically. Presently she said: "Stand up and walk over there. Let me see that outfit."

As Ellen did so, her eyes narrowed speculatively; her gray head bobbed from side to side as she studied various details. At last she nodded approvingly.

"You do very well, my dear. The outfit is well planned and well designed. And it fits you. That is the trouble with most homemade clothes. They never fit properly . . . Walk over there again, will you? And turn more slowly. And raise one arm, like this."

Ellen obeyed, glancing back with a question in her eyes. The minutes were slipping by quickly, and back at the office Miss Phillips would be glancing at the time clock on the wall and wondering why Miss Carlan was overstaying her lunch hour to such an extent.

She should have been worrying about that. But she wasn't.

She was far more disturbed because Rosalind was not showing the interest in the details of her sewing which she had so hopefully anticipated.

Walk over there . . . turn around . . . raise your arm, so!

What had all that to do with sewing? Unless she wanted to be sure how the skirt hung, and whether the sleeves were set in properly.

That was it, of course. Ellen smiled hopefully as the understanding reassured her. She was eager for the next moment, when she might show the finer details of her craftsmanship—the handbound seams, the intricate buttonholes.

Studies Her

Rosalind was standing now, studying her from a new angle. "Turn around once more . . . that's right. Now stand still—your head a little higher. Hold it! Mm-m-m . . ." She nodded her head slowly. "Fine. Fine. Take the jacket off now, will you?"

Ellen handed it over quickly, expecting to see it turned inside out and examined.

But Rosalind threw it over a chair carelessly, without a second glance. "Size 14, aren't you? Yes, a perfect 14. A little short, perhaps. But you're a type. A definite type . . . and with that red-gold hair . . ."

She went back to her desk, motioned Ellen to her chair again. For a moment she just sat there, tapping the desk thoughtfully with her pencil.

Then, abruptly, she faced Ellen. "Would you like a job with me?"

Ellen's eyes widened to their full extent. "I'd love it! Even if it were only basting seams . . ."

Rosalind smiled. "I'm not going to give you any sewing to do at all. I believe you'd be much more valuable to me in another capacity."

"What?"

"As a model."

"A model?"

"Yes. Your type is unusual, Ellen. There are plenty of redheads, but most of them have too hard an outer shell for beauty. And thank Heaven at the convent they teach the girls how to walk gracefully!"

Ellen was perplexed. "I wanted to sew. . ." she murmured vaguely. What would Mother Rosa ever say to her becoming a model?

This, thought Ellen, is to be the most exciting night of my life. Her eyes, as she surveyed the last details of the evening's accessories to excitement, were kindled with a warm glow of expectancy.

True, there had been other nights. Graduation night at St. Peter's, when she stood on the platform in the auditorium and received Peter's enormous bouquet of American beauty roses.

A night two weeks later, when she had enjoyed her first grown-up date with him.

That, too, had been a tremendous night; a drive down Broadway in a taxi, when it seemed that every blinking, twinkling electric light had been switched on for her own personal appreciation . . . dinner at one of the hotels, with quiet, stringed music to lend an off-stage background for romance . . . and then the unbelievably beautiful spectacle at the Music Hall . . .

Peter's Night

But those occasions were nothing compared with the magical promise of this evening. This was Peter's own night. This was his celebration of triumph; his debut as a man of importance.

It was one night out of his lifetime, and he asked her to share it with him. He had chosen her to stand with him, side by side, as he took his first conquering step upward.

To Be Continued.

88 Persons Get Traffic Tickets Fixed

Congressman Among Them; Seven Plead Diplomatic Immunity

One Congressman, one Congressman's secretary, and seven who pleaded diplomatic immunity were among the 88 persons whose traffic tickets were "fixed" last week, according to a list made public yesterday by police.

Warnings were issued to 73, while 15 were accommodated by outright cancellation of their tickets.

Nine persons evaded fine on the familiar excuse that their cars were either pushed or disabled. Four said they were on official Government business when they committed the violations, while three doctors said they were attending emergency cases.

Representative Homer D. Angell (Republican), of Oregon, got off with a warning for parking overtime because he said he was on Government business. F. Byrne Austin, secretary to Representative William Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, escaped with a warning for overtime parking, thanks to the intervention of the Congressman.

Sol A. Simmons, of 1915 Kalorama road northwest, was excused with a warning when he pleaded that he parked irregularly because he suddenly became ill. Frank B. La Porte, Lanham, Md., escaped with a warning with the notation "received no warning since 1933." Henry Thomfordt, 2012 Pierce Mill road northwest, talked himself out of a fine for stopping in a no-parking zone by explaining that he stopped only long enough to get a pint of milk.

A fire inspector was among those "tagged." John E. Palsgrove, 614 Quintana place northwest, of the District Fire Department, was pardoned when he explained that he was investigating a complaint.

Chester B. Duncan, 126 C street northeast, blamed it all on a doctor. He said his physician kept him longer than anticipated, and got off with a warning.

Major Ernest Brown, superintendent of police, used his good offices to arrange a warning for Bernard B. Kreisler, 3000 Tilden street northwest, who said he stopped briefly for some drug supplies.

Pleading diplomatic immunity were the following: Dr. Alberto Mateos, Spanish Embassy; Aleksandra Chramile, 4115 Wisconsin avenue northwest, Rene P. G. Weiser, 1601 V street northwest; I. Bukai Baysoy, Turkish Embassy; David A. Castro, 3232 Ellicott street northwest; Edmund J. Healey, 1746 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and Isabelle Poates, 2127 California street northwest.

Pharmaceutical Group To Convene Thursday

The District Pharmaceutical Association will open its annual convention Thursday at 10 a. m. at the Wardman Park Hotel with an address by Edgar Morris, chairman of the greater National Capital committee of the Board of Trade.

Dr. David Maxwell will reply on behalf of the association. The organization is entering its eighty-eighth year. A banquet Friday evening at the hotel will close the sessions.

Bored With It All, Magic Rabbit Kicks Boss in Eye, Turns Up Nose

When J. W. McDonald, society magician, is not pulling Peter Rabbit from his hat, he is walking him like this. A bit astonished as well as amused were Mrs. David H. Barron, Mrs. Jule Gordon and Mrs. Charles Cohn, who attended the sixth annual donor luncheon of the Sisterhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel

However, His Owner Says He's Smart, So He Gets Away With It, Even If Life On Stage Palls and He'd Rather Flirt

Peter Rabbit, who has eyes like dark glass buttons and a white coat with black splotches, lazed on his leash in the Shoreham Hotel lobby yesterday, the dark eyes in profound boredom.

This is the affected pose of Peter Rabbit, for fashionable lobbies and not a briar patch are his accustomed haunt, and he has a bored, blase look he acquired from the persons he lounges with.

Yesterday, on the other end of the leash, as he always is, was bald, pleasant W. J. McDonald, roving society magician, who soon must get another rabbit to take from the magic carpet (the hat is old business). This is because Peter Rabbit is becoming too wise, too bored and altogether has gone upstage on McDonald. That is, Peter Rabbit, the minute he springs surprisingly from the carpet, wants to trip into the audience, sniff around and muscle in on society.

Peter isn't interested much in his business, the thing that pays for his grass and cabbage leaves, but McDonald, attached to the rabbit—even though the rabbit leaps on his bed in the middle of nights and kicks him in the eye as a signal for food—finds this bored rabbit about as good as any to take from the carpet. He was long since disillusioned about the professional attitudes of rabbits, but, marveling on it, undertook some study.

First, he found the rabbit more intelligent than the dog: "Besides this trait of intelligence, I have found the rabbit to be vicious. He will turn on you and stomp his hind feet and make a face that scares you. If I give this one grass for several days he comes to me and frowns and stomps his foot for grain. Of course, I have had a few dumb ones that did nothing."

The rabbit, he said, "has a lot of strategy," is the old No. 1 blitzkreiger to outsmart some dogs and whip others. They are not interested in magic, or being taken from hats, had rather investigate small noises they hear or run from such loud ones as automobile horns. They all like their audiences, when the audiences are friendly and scratch the rabbits's noses, he said.

Beard Is Denied Court Review

Sam R. Beard, convicted Washington gambler, failed yesterday to get a Supreme Court review of a decision denying him a writ of habeas corpus. Beard is serving a two-to-six-year term in the Federal penitentiary at Aalanta.

Appealing from the Fifth Federal Circuit Court, Beard contended evidence against him was obtained by the interception of telephone messages in violation of his Constitutional rights.

Hoff, 84, Dies; Decorated White House

Artist, a Native Of Norway, Succumbs To Pneumonia

Martin Christianson Hoff, Washington artist and interior decorator whose work adorns the White House and Capitol, died late Sunday in George Washington University Hospital after a three-day struggle with pneumonia. He was 84.

His health had been failing since an automobile accident six years ago in which he suffered a broken jaw.

A native of Oslo, Norway, Mr. Hoff came to the United States in 1883 and a short while later settled in Washington. He attended the Corcoran Art School and received a bronze medal in an exhibit there in 1902.

Best known as a fresco painter, he worked for many years as an interior decorator, and it was during this period that he decorated a staircase at the White House. Later he painted a number of frescoes at the Capitol.

As an interior decorator he worked at many of Washington's largest residences, including the Peter Bliss, MeLean nad Willard estates. His frescoes appear on the walls of several of Washington's largest churches and hotels.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Agnes Ferguson, of Foxboro, Mass., and several nieces. Funeral services will be at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the Hines funeral home. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Children Guide Nature Walks

A back-to-nature course for public school children in which 100 fifth and sixth graders were instructed to be guides for fellow pupils, ended yesterday.

Donald Edward McHenry, National Capital Parks naturalist, who launched the course six weeks ago, conducted a Shepherd School group on a hike through upper Rock Creek Park. The actual guiding, however, was by 10 of his "graduates."

The elementary schools supplied 10 pupils each for instruction by McHenry in nature walk conducting. All 100 have now passed their tests and, between now and the term's close next month, will lead an estimated 10,000 boys and girls on nature strolls. The other schools with guides instructed by McHenry are Bunker Hill, Rose Lees Hardy, John Burroughs, Jefferson, Barnard, Lovejoy, Wormley, Phillips and Mott.
